Casa Alva: From home to club to home again

By Mary Thurwachter

Back in 1957, Eisenhower was president, Leave It to Beaver premiered on TV, and Elvis was shaking, rattling and rolling his way toward becoming the king of rock ‘n’ roll.

Closer to home, a couple of movers and shakers were making headlines, too. The former Duchess of Marlborough, Consuelo Vanderbilt Balsan, was selling her fashionable Manalapan estate, Casa Alva, to developer William E. Benjamin II.

Benjamin turned much of the mangrove hammock island into a gated, luxury subdivision called Point Manalapan and transformed the Vanderbilt Balsan estate into a private social club and golf course.

“I wanted to have some sort of center to the community here,” says Benjamin, who moved to Florida from Southampton, Long Island, in 1950.

He knew a thing or two about local social clubs as a member of the Everglades Club Club, and he knew they called it ‘crazy’ joggers.

“Very few people were running and people used to think there was something wrong with me.” And now?

Well, if ever there were a family addicted to endorphins, it’s this one.

Maybe you’ve heard about this sweaty gang — or saw them, even, at the Marathon of Palm Beaches, the grandkids wearing sombreros, working See COASTAL STARS on page 2

Fitness Stars

Fitness bug an epidemic in this family

By Emily J. Minor

The fitness bug took root many, many years ago, with little notice, when Leonard Griff began teaching his four children through example.

Griff, a retired radiation oncologist, would take the stairs. He’d bike to work. He jogged before they even called it jogging.

“I think they called it ‘crazy’ back then,” he says. “Very few people were running and people used to think there was something wrong with me.” And now?

Annexation

Annexation specter puts island on alert

By Thomas R. Collins

Just south of Briny Breezes, east of the St. Andrews golf course and north of Gulf Stream sit two rarities: pieces of barrier island land that are unincorporated, belonging to no city. And the residents have seemed to like it that way.

But lately Boynton Beach officials have been talking about making those areas — “pockets,” they’re called — part of their city through annexation. That would likely bring better services but also higher taxes — and a loss of a sense of independence. It also raises questions about what could be built there.

The interest in annexing the pockets, the last unincorporated pieces of barrier island in southern Palm Beach County, has put neighboring cities on alert and prompted the Florida Coalition for Preservation to begin education efforts to make sure residents know what’s going on.

Boynton Beach publicly discussed including the pockets as part of an official study — called an interlocal services boundary agreement, or ISBA — that needs to happen before annexation is possible. But the city, for now, is focusing only on areas west of the Intracoastal, most of it west of I-95.

Dona Brosemer, a consultant working on the annexation issue for the city, said Boynton Beach considered it to be too complicated politically to include the barrier island pockets in the study with those western areas.

Kurt Bressner, Boynton Beach’s city manager, said annexation of the barrier island pockets is still up for

See ANNEXATION on page 5

Unsafe playground equipment removed

Hypoluxo Island neighbors working with city to find replacement.

Inside

Summer camps sampler
Kids can play at sports, study art or work in fashion during vacation. Page 27

Paws up for pets
Manalapan resident rescues animals. Page 33

Obituaries. Page 28

Become a ‘local-avore’
Local markets keep food close to home.

Page 20
Editorial

Summer comings and goings

Easter marks the beginning of the end of tourist season — no more waiting in line at restaurants and movies; less traffic along A1A; fewer people at the beach.

As much as we enjoy the quiet, lazy days of summer, most of us have jobs (at least the lucky ones) and feel the pinch when snowbirds depart. Especially those of us with small, family-owned businesses who know only too intimately how the ebb and flow of a service-oriented economy can devastate a national recession.

Luckily for The Coastal Star, our piece of paradise is unique enough to weather seasonal downturns. Our sister publication, The Palm Beach Arts Paper, has dramatically impacted the cultural landscape of West Palm Beach. During the summer months and return to print in October with an excellent group of arts writers (www.palmbeachartspaper.com), we'll focus their attention on their Web site (www.thecoastalstar.com) and give you several ways to read the paper online. We wish our snowbirds safe travels. If you're staying for the summer, stop by and say hello. We'll be here.

— Mary Kate Leming, editor

COASTAL STARS:

Continued from page 1

Leonard Griff’s grandchildren have followed their families’ leads by participating in fitness events. Robin (left), Daniel, Connor, Jeremy, David, Halliey and Matthew have hand cups of water to runners during the Marathon of the Palm Beaches.

Sister and brother Nancy and Charles Griff, who compete together in Ironman competitions, run along Old Ocean Boulevard in Ocean Ridge. Photos by Jerry Cooper

Nominate Someone to be a Coastal Star: Send a note to nominations@thecoastalstar.com or call 337-1553.

Instead, Charles will compete in an Ironman in Utah the first of May. All this running about town — Charles Griff says he runs 30 to 40 miles a week, usually in the beach neighborhoods around his Ocean Ridge home; Nancy says he has to run at least eight miles each time out to get a decent workout — has given the two of them a special connection.

When it’s Mile 21 of a 26.2-mile race and your legs start cramping and your brother says all the annoying things you need to hear — Put your arms down. Move your legs. You can do it! — that’s a pretty big bowl of thanks.

In retrospect.

“His name was Dolf...”

Continued from page 2

he water station on Hypoluxo Island with grandma (Roberta, also a doctor). Leonard Griff, 75, ran the half marathon. So did his son, Lawrence, 42, and his daughter-in-law, Christine, 43. They both flew down from New York. Nancy Griff, his daughter, ran the full 26.2 miles. So did her husband, Scott Reiter, a local lawyer. “That’s amazing,” says Nancy Griff, who lives on Hypoluxo Island. “He had lung surgery and 10 years ago, he couldn’t even run a mile.” Oh, but there’s more. Charles Griff, another Griff kid who grew up under the examples of Leonard and Roberta, ran the full marathon — and he’s a Type 1 insulin-dependent diabetic. “I think that does add another challenge,” Griff says. Making a giant Griff family understatement since intense, prolonged exercise for Type 1 diabetics is tricky business, requiring constant attention to food, insulin and blood-sugar levels.

Griff, 43, a dermatologist, has had diabetes since he was 18. Leonard Griff said despite the heavy work-schedule when he and his wife were raising the kids in Harrisburg, Pa., he was always home for after-school sports with the children. And it caught on...

“It’s my therapy,” says Nancy Griff, a psychiatrist with a local practice. “It’s one time that I’m outside and nobody can get in touch with me.”

But wait. Is running 26.2 miles really that much of a physical challenge? What if you swam 2.4 miles? And biked for 112? And THEN ran a full marathon? Yes. Drs. Charles and Nancy compete in Ironman triathlons. In the last two years, the brother-sister duo has done four of them together. And even though they each qualified for the Boston Marathon when they ran the Palm Beach race back in December — and, for a while, they intended to run the Boston — they’ve decided against making the trip.

Coastal Star
Riders flout bike laws and standards of civility

Nowhere in your March bicycle-sign article do I read anything about enforcement of the laws currently on the books covering bicycle safety. As an everyday motorist on A1A, I regularly have to contend with large “pods” of bicyclists frequently riding three and four abreast. A light tap of my horn to warn the riders of my intention to pass quite often results in rude gestures and derisive shouts from the throng. I have to wonder whether strict enforcement of the “no more than two abreast riders” and “three feet clearance” statutes, as well as rider observance of traffic signals, would make eight more signs along A1A superfluous.

I suppose we could always close A1A to vehicular traffic to appease the bike lobby. Coming events cast their shadow before them.

T. C. Mulry
Gulf Stream

Residents well-served by quality newspaper

I have a place in Delray Beach and I reside in Rehoboth Beach, Del. I was surprised at the newspaper delivery as I was leaving to go to the airport. During my flight I was able to read it and thoroughly enjoyed it. I think the quality of the paper used, advertisements and the contents are so nice and refreshing, especially for us who have a residence in the areas served by the newspaper.

I am planning on getting a subscription for myself and a friend who is also from Delaware but has a place in South Palm Beach. I have a blog-style Web site and I mention your paper in it. If you would like to see it, please go to www.aboutmybeaches.com.

Gloria Merryman
Delray Beach

Letters to the Editor

The Coastal Star welcomes letters to the editor about issues in the community. These are subject to editing and must include your name, address and phone number. Mail to 5011 N. Ocean Blvd., #2, Ocean Ridge, FL 33435 or email editor@thecoastalstar.com.

Letters: The Coastal Star welcomes letters to the editor about issues in the community. These are subject to editing and must include your name, address and phone number. Mail to 5011 N. Ocean Blvd., #2, Ocean Ridge, FL 33435 or email editor@thecoastalstar.com.

Letters to the Editor

Riders flout bike laws and standards of civility

Nowhere in your March bicycle-sign article do I read anything about enforcement of the laws currently on the books covering bicycle safety. As an everyday motorist on A1A, I regularly have to contend with large “pods” of bicyclists frequently riding three and four abreast. A light tap of my horn to warn the riders of my intention to pass quite often results in rude gestures and derisive shouts from the throng. I have to wonder whether strict enforcement of the “no more than two abreast riders” and “three feet clearance” statutes, as well as rider observance of traffic signals, would make eight more signs along A1A superfluous.

I suppose we could always close A1A to vehicular traffic to appease the bike lobby. Coming events cast their shadow before them.

T. C. Mulry
Gulf Stream

Residents well-served by quality newspaper

I have a place in Delray Beach and I reside in Rehoboth Beach, Del. I was surprised at the newspaper delivery as I was leaving to go to the airport. During my flight I was able to read it and thoroughly enjoyed it. I think the quality of the paper used, advertisements and the contents are so nice and refreshing, especially for us who have a residence in the areas served by the newspaper.

I am planning on getting a subscription for myself and a friend who is also from Delaware but has a place in South Palm Beach. I have a blog-style Web site and I mention your paper in it. If you would like to see it, please go to www.aboutmybeaches.com.

Gloria Merryman
Delray Beach

Letters to the Editor

The Coastal Star welcomes letters to the editor about issues in the community. These are subject to editing and must include your name, address and phone number. Mail to 5011 N. Ocean Blvd., #2, Ocean Ridge, FL 33435 or email editor@thecoastalstar.com.

Letters: The Coastal Star welcomes letters to the editor about issues in the community. These are subject to editing and must include your name, address and phone number. Mail to 5011 N. Ocean Blvd., #2, Ocean Ridge, FL 33435 or email editor@thecoastalstar.com.

Letters to the Editor

Riders flout bike laws and standards of civility

Nowhere in your March bicycle-sign article do I read anything about enforcement of the laws currently on the books covering bicycle safety. As an everyday motorist on A1A, I regularly have to contend with large “pods” of bicyclists frequently riding three and four abreast. A light tap of my horn to warn the riders of my intention to pass quite often results in rude gestures and derisive shouts from the throng. I have to wonder whether strict enforcement of the “no more than two abreast riders” and “three feet clearance” statutes, as well as rider observance of traffic signals, would make eight more signs along A1A superfluous.

I suppose we could always close A1A to vehicular traffic to appease the bike lobby. Coming events cast their shadow before them.

T. C. Mulry
Gulf Stream

Residents well-served by quality newspaper

I have a place in Delray Beach and I reside in Rehoboth Beach, Del. I was surprised at the newspaper delivery as I was leaving to go to the airport. During my flight I was able to read it and thoroughly enjoyed it. I think the quality of the paper used, advertisements and the contents are so nice and refreshing, especially for us who have a residence in the areas served by the newspaper.

I am planning on getting a subscription for myself and a friend who is also from Delaware but has a place in South Palm Beach. I have a blog-style Web site and I mention your paper in it. If you would like to see it, please go to www.aboutmybeaches.com.

Gloria Merryman
Delray Beach

Letters to the Editor

The Coastal Star welcomes letters to the editor about issues in the community. These are subject to editing and must include your name, address and phone number. Mail to 5011 N. Ocean Blvd., #2, Ocean Ridge, FL 33435 or email editor@thecoastalstar.com.
Local Voices

Police program enriches understanding

We joined the Citizen’s Police Academy sponsored by the Boynton Beach Police Department. This is our second year taking this class. The class meets on Wednesdays for 10 weeks from 7 to 10 p.m.

During each session we had up to six policemen give us demonstrations and slide shows. Police instructors answered all our questions. We had two or three different program elements each week and every one of them was very interesting, some were fun to watch and all were informative. They ranged from K-9 unit demonstrations to information about special weapons and tactics and the Police Athletic League.

It would be hard to pick our favorite evening, as each night we learned so much from each group. On one memorable night they Tasered two rookie policemen. Every police officer who will be using a Taser must experience being Tasered. It was difficult to watch, as it felt like one of our grandchildren was being Tasered that evening.

In addition to the classroom experiences, we participated in a ride-along program. We were able to spend four hours riding with the policemen while they were on duty.

We had no idea how the other half of the world lives and once we were home safe we thanked God for our country and our freedom. We are so lucky to live in the country we live in.

We are so lucky to live in the country we live in. We have always felt so safe in our area, but with drugs and all the crime we have now, it is good to know we are so well-protected. We always had a lot of respect for our policemen, but now are more aware of the job they are doing and the danger they are in each day. They are like everyone else. They do their job the best as they can and look forward to a safe return home to their families after each shift.

After we finished our 10 weeks, the Police Department hosted a banquet for class members. They gave us a diploma, shirts and a picture of the whole group who attended.

It was a wonderful and fulfilling experience for us and many others. We met a lot of nice people and now when we hear the police siren, we know the police are out doing their job to protect every one of us. We should feel very blessed to have them in our community.

Bev and Lew Williams
Briny Breezes
ANNEXATION: Continued from page 1

consideration, just not right now.

“We’re just going to go ahead with the workload we have,” he said. “And then we’ll swing into consideration of the other areas possibly later on this year.”

Boynton Beach and Palm Beach County are in the process of approving an interlocal agreement to provide fire-rescue service to the pockets, to avoid another tragedy like the choking death of a resident there in November. But that’s separate from outright annexation.

Annexation of the pockets has to be approved with petition-style signatures from a majority of the residents — or 50 percent plus one. Just because it’s not in the official study plan doesn’t mean annexation of the pockets is not being researched now, said Bob Ganger of the Coalition, a group that works to protect the barrier island from excessive development.

“In order to make a sensible assessment of future service needs and capabilities, they really have to look at any county pockets that they currently serve and that would include the barrier island because they serve the barrier island with water and sewer,” said Ganger, who also is president of the Gulf Stream Civic Association.

“From the point of view of the people who live in the county pocket, whether or not they’re identified on a map of the ISBA study, they probably ought to be thinking about how do they feel eventually being annexed by Boynton Beach, whether that’s a year from now, ten years from now or sometime in the future.”

Existing development rules allow six to 12 units per acre in the pockets, depending on the size and location of the lot being developed. A resurrection of the Seahorse project north of Gulf Stream is proposed at 42 units — or 12 per acre and possibly seven by Boynton, development there will be capped at six units per acre and 35 feet in height.

Ganger said the Coalition feels that the agreement should carry the day in the event of annexation, but said island residents need to stay on their toes nonetheless.

Any close observer of government knows that an agreement that’s approved by one slate of elected officials might be undone by another slate.

County Commissioner Steven Abrams, who represents the area, said he supported annexation of the pockets to get better fire-rescue service. But since that is being addressed with a separate agreement, he said he is fine with annexation being considered later.

Ocean Ridge and Briny Breezes recently proposed resolutions that allow them to sit at the table during discussions about annexation. Briny Breezes Mayor Roger Bennett said the residents in the pockets have generally resisted the idea.

“They feel more like they’re self-governed there,” he said.

Ocean Ridge Town Manager Ken Schenck said the town just wants to keep up with the annexation topic.

“The commission hasn’t taken a stance on it because it hasn’t come up,” he said.

Gulf Stream Town Manager Bill Thrasher said his town also just wants to stay involved.

“We want to know what’s going on,” he said. “We don’t want to wake up one morning and find out something’s happened that would be detrimental to us.”

Plenty of FREE parking nearby!

GreenMack

In the street on SE 4th Ave., just South of Atlantic Avenue

HAPPY SPRING!

Come visit your favorite Vendors:

- Capella Farms
- Green Cay Farms
- Thomas Produce
- Capt. Clay’s Seafood
- Bistro Blends Olive Oils & Balsamic Vinegars
- Taste of Africa
- Crepes by the Sea
- Old School Bread Co.
- Pappardelle’s Pasta
- Capt. Red Beard Hot Sauces
- The Orchard Doctor
- Healthy Gourmet Granola
- Anita’s Guacamole
- Seely’s Gourmet Hummus
- Couture Cakes
- Organic Juice Booth
- Amazing Creations
- Cut Flowers
- Serenity Flow’s Handmade Soaps
- Mozzarella Fresh Italian Cheeses
- The Happy Pickle
- Organic Olive Oils
- Nuts to You
- Tweedle Organic Dog Treats
- Local Honey
- Need Garden Advice? Ask the Master Gardener
- Caribbean Spices & Bean Dips
- Brooklyn Bagel Company
- Mamma Susse Homemade Marinara & Pasta Sauces
- Amanda’s Tress
- Philly Cheese Steaks
- Live Music
- Farm Fresh Eggs

For more information, please call (561)276-7511 or email: greenmarket@delraycra.org

The Delray GreenMarket is a Saturday morning destination is an open air market place offering everything from off-the-vine produce to just picked citrus and fragrant baked goods to fresh cut flowers, blooming plants and gourmet taste treats.

Green Market Plaza

460 S Federal Highway

Saturday, April 3, 2010 10AM to 3PM

The Easter Bonnet Pet Parade

Saturday, April 3, 2010 10AM from Old School Square to the Green Market
Along the Avenues

Delray promises another Affair to remember

Brace yourselves. It’s April, but it seems like the season is just starting.

Savor the Avenue’s long table has barely been cleared, the last red is still spinning at the Delray Beach Film Festival, and already the aroma of conch fritters is filling the air along Atlantic Avenue. Fritters, of course, mean that the 48th Delray Affair is upon us.

From April 9 to 11, more than 800 artists and crafters from 38 states and 16 countries will show off their talents, local vendors will offer everything from bric-a-brac to fresh vegetables, and the seemingly endless food and drink stations will be highlighted by what many believe is food from heaven: those conch fritters.

Doesn’t cost a thing to get in, which is good, because with all the good stuff on sale, your wallets still will take a beating. Organizers expect upward of 300,000 visitors, so be patient, have fun and bring plenty of sunscreen.

A week later (April 17), it’s the Sixth Annual Circle on the Square “Martinis & Motown” Food & Wine Dance Party under the tent at Old School Square, with food and drink from top area eateries. For advance tickets, call 561-637-4441; general admission is $90, VIP $120. Hours are 7-10:30 p.m.

The aforementioned long table was set up on March 18 right down the centerline of Atlantic from Swinton to Fifth Avenue, with breaks only for stoplights and the railroad tracks. The dinners, more than 1,000 in all (up 50 percent from last year’s inaugural) barely noticed the two noisy northbound freight cars as they enjoyed their prix fixe fare at 18 of Delray’s top restaurants.

Each restaurant set its own four-course menu and its own price. Santa Rita Wines provided pairings for each course. At the low end for $50, Cabana El Rey offered a nuevo Latina “fab fusion” meal of beef empanada or spicy shrimp, cabana salad or lobster bisque, churrasco (marinated skirt steak) or roasted chicken and shrimp in a garlic and wine demi-glace and flan or tres leches.

At the top, the 56 fans of La Gigale paid $85 for antipasto, jumbo Maryland crab cake or beef and goat cheese salad; veal wrapped in prosciutto in an empanada or spicy shrimp, cabana salad or lobster bisque, churrasco (marinated skirt steak) or roasted chicken and shrimp in a garlic and wine demi-glace and flan or tres leches.

Most of the restaurants sold out in advance, although a few late deciders were accommodated by Go! the Brazilian steakhouse. A slight chill did little to dampen enthusiasm, and, in fact, to Linda Bean it was downright balmy.

“The weather’s been terrible this winter,” the lobsterwoman said of her home state of Maine (she’s L.L. Bean’s granddaughter), as she made a point of chatting up all her Peruvian Rod guests. “In the places where it usually snows, it’s been rainy and muddy. A real mess. So it’s really nice to be here.”

Despite all the eatin’ in the street, most Atlantic Avenue restaurants, typical for a Thursday night, were packed with diners. That meant double duty for Larry LaValley, executive chef at Vic & Angelo’s, who recently took on the same role across the street at The Office, after owner David Warner dismissed uber chef Mark Militello (reportedly via text message). Based on the reaction at his tables to the osso bucco Milanese and Guinness braised short ribs, LaValley did just fine.

Though Taste Gastropub was still a few weeks from opening, chef Allen Sussner used the long table as a test run for his staff. Dubbed the “Ponce de Leon of New Florida Cuisine” by The New York Times, the James Beard Award winner couldn’t have been more excited as he offered last-minute instructions to his staff on the sidewalk.

“We’re excited,” said Sussner, who also plies his trade at Chef Allen’s in Aventura. “We finally get to show our stuff. Delray’s such an exciting place.”

Each guest received a backpack, courtesy of Office Depot, and was urged to fill it with school supplies or food for redistribution to needy school kids through the Office Depot Foundation, which also received $5 from each meal served at Savor the Avenue.

Too bad the crowd at the Movies of Delray wasn’t larger. Then again, patrons are accustomed to seeing movie stars on the screen, not in person. But in slacks, a jersey top and sneakers, Jessica Walter hardly looked the part. In some ways, she didn’t seem to feel the part, either, as she hosted a special Delray Beach Film Festival screening on March 24 of her most memorable film, Play Misty for Me.

When one fan mentioned one of her earliest roles, that of Clint Eastwood’s obsessive, possessive jazz radio fan in Play Misty for Me, a portrayal that blazed the trail for Fatal Attraction and Basic Instinct.

“It was a great movie to work on,” Walter said.

Almost as quickly as she arrived, Walter had to leave. “If I miss my flight, my husband will never forgive me,” she yelled on the way out with festival organizer Michael Posner.

A busy man, Posner founded the event in 2006. He’s a veterinarian by trade, but movies are his love, and Delray, he believes, is the perfect place to hold a festival. It may also be the only film festival that includes a surfing contest and a beach cleanup. But Posner has nerve. He once invited Anthony Hopkins, who gave a “maybe.”

Last year the festival honored Barry Bostwick, who’s back as the “creative chair.” Walter and Sharon Gless (Cagney & Lacey) are Lifetime Achievement Award recipients.

After 33 years of c’st si bon in Lake Worth, I look back on it as a great memory. Tough financial times led to a foreclosure last year and the recent ill health of founder Gilbert Cela forced the classic French restaurant to

Seated outside 32 East (from left): Ginny Marx, Jan Judson, Mary Lafferty, Marie Dering, Bob Judson were just a few of the 1,000 diners at Savor the Avenue.

Top: (above left) Chef Allen Sussner; (above right) Gilbert Cela; (top right) Chef Allen’s. Photos by Jerry Lower
Emilia Kawashima (left) and Stephanie Fries perform during Celebration on the Piazza, Florida Stage’s annual fund-raising dinner March 23 at Manalapan’s Plaza del Mar. Photo by Jerry Lower close March 21. Should Cela’s son Marc be unable to resurrect L’Anjou, it will be remembered every time someone sees Body Heat. The restaurant’s exterior provided backdrop for a meeting between Ned Racine (William Hurt) and Matty Walker (Kathleen Turner) in the classic film noir shot in and around Lake Worth in November and December 1981.

AVENUES:
Continued from page 6

A thank-you ad in The Palm Beach Post from the Ladd Co., which produced the film, included L’Anjou as one of the businesses “whose cooperation and patience were indispensable.”

Incidentally, the movie’s best line isn’t uttered in Lake Worth. When Walker smirks at Racine with, “You aren’t very smart, are you. I like that in a man,” they’re at the bandshell on Hollywood Beach, about 45 miles south.

Thom Smith is a freelance writer. He can be reached at thomsmit3@ymail.com.

Just north of its adjoining property, the famous Gulf Stream Golf Club, sits this newly constructed deep water estate on an unequalled point lot of the Intracoastal Waterway. Designed by a well-known architect who has imbued the home with warmth, elegance and charm throughout the interior—five bedrooms, six full and two one-half baths and an unusually spectacular kitchen; he has also situated the home to take in the magnificent vistas that a home with 330 feet of continuous water frontage will command. Other spectacular amenities include an elevator, three car garage and grand entry foyer with dramatic circular staircase. $7,950,000. Call for your private, personal tour.

William F. Koch, Jr.
Incorporated Realtor
Established 1956
900 East Atlantic Avenue • Delray Beach, FL 33483 • 561-276-6002 • cell 561-715-2133

Hello...We’d like to introduce ourselves...

KROBATSCH & DUQUE
a different approach in cabinetry

They are incredibly IMPRESSIVE.
- William Wietsma (renowned Architect/Builder)

We encourage you to call our satisfied clients.

KROBATSCH & DUQUE inc.
Complete Cabinetry Services
By Appointment Only

- Traditional & Contemporary Luxury Fitted Furniture
- Professional Installation & Coordination
- Custom Furniture & Furniture Design
- Quick CAD Presentations & Space Planning

302 northeast sixth avenue (federal hwy/us1 north) delray beach, florida 33483
p. 561.274.3939 / f. 561.274.3940
please visit us at www.kdcabinetryservices.com
Better fire rescue response pledged under interim plan

By Nirvi Shah

Fire rescue officials from Boynton Beach and Palm Beach County pledged to improve emergency response times in the county pocket — even without an agreement in hand that would put the city in charge of the area.

Boynton Beach has fire stations much closer to the area and already serves neighboring Briny Breezes and Ocean Ridge, which pay for those services. But city commissioners couldn’t give their blessing to an adoption commissioners couldn’t give and Ocean Ridge, which pay

neighboring Briny Breezes

stations much closer to the charge of the area.

Boynton Beach will respond to the southernmost area in the county pocket more often

Beach County pledged to

Boynton Beach and Palm

Fire rescue officials from

Boynton Beach, Palm Beach County Fire

Fire rescue Chief Steve Jerauld

the way the system works,

county fire rescue staff decide to call upon other agencies based on the nature of the call or if county workers are spread too thin working other calls. The proposed agreement would have cut out the dispatcher, rerouting every county pocket call automatically to Boynton Beach.

In Dunn’s case, Jerauld said, conflicting information about the severity of the 48-year-old’s condition from the people on the phone — at one point they said he was breathing — led to dispatchers’ decision not to call another agency.

“We had suggested Boynton for sure,” Jerauld said, adding, “There’s no way to tell had they been called as to whether the outcome would be different.”

On average, it takes Palm Beach County fire rescue workers 11 to 16 minutes to reach the county pocket.

Overall, the county responds on average in 6 minutes and 26 seconds to calls countywide, spokesman Don Delucia said. The average response time by Boynton Beach is 4 minutes, 2 seconds, city Fire Rescue Chief William Bingham said.

Bingham said that, based on conversations with Jerauld, “We have agreed to allow our mutual aid agreement to resolve the issue of extended response times for fire and emergency medical service calls to this area in which a delay in response time may have a detrimental effect on the outcome.”

He said he expects Boynton Beach will respond to the county pocket more often than in the past. None of this takes the approval of the City Commission, which questioned the cost of the area, whether it would compromise service to the city’s taxpaying residents and if Delray Beach should be asked to be the first responder to the southernmost area in question. They also think they should be in charge of conducting fire inspections in the area to ensure buildings have as many fire prevention measures in place as possible.

“We didn’t reject anything,” newly elected Mayor Jose Rodriguez said. “We said ‘Chief, can you go back and see if that makes any sense or not?’”

County Commissioner Steven Abrams initially proposed the change after hearing from county pocket residents upset about how events unfolded the day of Dunn’s death. After city commissioners balked at the automatic mutual aid agreement, he said he asked Jerauld to figure something out.

They didn’t just drop the ball on that one call. They have totally let it sit there until it bit them,” Bingham said, adding that the county should have had a plan in place to better serve county pocket residents long before Dunn’s death.

“They didn’t just drop the ball on that one call. They have totally let it sit there until it bit them,”

Last year, Bingham said Palm Beach County responded to 58 calls in all to the county pocket — and it took an average of more than 11 minutes for fire rescue to arrive. Of those calls, 42 were for medical emergencies. In most cases, the city would be able to recoup expenses associated with those calls through medical insurance. Of the remaining calls, seven were for fires, including two in area high-rises, three were about car accidents and six were false alarms.

Boynton Beach City Manager Kurt Bressner could have signed off on the measure without consulting commissioners, but he instead chose to present it at a city meeting that was the first for two newly elected commissioners and the first with Rodriguez presiding as mayor.

“I thought it was important that the commission look at this,” Bressner said. “I got the sense that they would have had an issue with it. Everybody’s looking at dollars now, (although) from the average citizen’s point of view they don’t care what color the fire engine is. They just want it to be there.”
Delray Beach

Crosswalk signs judged effective; expect more

By Margie Plunkett

Five more sets of crosswalk signs designed to safeguard pedestrians and educate drivers will be installed on A1A after a state study deemed test signs near Atlantic Avenue effective.

The Florida Department of Transportation gave a thumbs up to Delray Beach’s request for the added signs, which are mounted on short plastic poles placed in the center of A1A to instruct motorists to stop for pedestrians.

Crosswalk signs are also expected to be put up near Briny Breezes, just south of the St. Andrews Club, and in Highland Beach. They were posted in Ocean Ridge early in March.

“It’s more educational to the motorist, to let them know it’s a state law,” said Carmen Li, FDOT senior engineer in training in Fort Lauderdale.

The FDOT study showed clear improvement of safety conditions for pedestrians after the Delray Beach test signs were placed, according to Li. “We got a lot of positive feedback,” she said. “The motorists’ compliance — stopping for pedestrians — improved and people felt more safe to cross between the signs.”

The evaluation indicated:

- Motorists have stopped by 25.9 percent.
- Driver-pedestrian crossings have been reduced by 28.6 percent.
- Unsignalized crosswalks, most that are painted like a zebra.

Engineer Randal L. Krejcarcek anticipated the new signs would be up by mid-April. “We’ve been asking for them for seven to eight years,” he said, but previously, the state didn’t recognize them as proper signs within the right of way.

The signs will cost up to $4,100, Krejcarsek said. The cost probably will be less, because fewer signs will be posted than initially proposed, because of conflicts with driveways, he said.

Each sign assembly has two panels, with some crossings suitable for one assembly and others for two, Li said.

Location of driveways and side streets determines how many assemblies can be used, she said. “They are recommended to go in unsignalized crosswalks, most that are painted like a zebra.”

Jim Smith, chairman of Safety As Floridians Expect, was pleased with the news. “It’s really a good thing. Those signs have been a big help.”

New Crossing Signs

Signs telling motorists to stop for pedestrians will be placed in the center of A1A at the following five Delray Beach locations. Two sets of pilot signs are just north and south of Atlantic Avenue as well.

- Atlantic Dunes Park, just north of the crossing.
- Casuarina Road, one set south of the crossing and a second set north of it.
- Beach Road, north of the crossing.
- South Crestwood Drive

SOURCE: Florida Department of Transportation

BRINY BREEZES BOAT SLIPS

Enjoy easy ocean-access from Boynton Inlet in a private, non-commercial marina.

Boat sizes from 24-11 to 36-11.

For more information, please call 561-276-7405

Fine High End Auction

Tuesday, April 27, 5 pm

Preview/Viewing
8 days, 9am-5pm: April 19-27. Closed Sunday.

2925 S. Federal Highway, Delray Beach, 561-278-8996
info@hoodauction.com

1) Bid in person 2) online: www.hoodauction.com 3) absentee 4) phone (4 options)

View catalog with pictures & estimates.

Free Appraisals!

Bill Hood & Sons

ART & ANTIQUE AUCTIONS

Liquidating several estates:

100 paintings, plethora of sterling, many bronzes, old and older furniture, jewelry, signed glass, outstanding 18th/19th C painted oriental stone screens (painted both sides), plus much more orientalia, ivories, jades, old porcelains, chandeliers, carpet, figurines, great smalls.

Do a friend a favor and show them this.

Present this ad and receive $25 off your April 27th purchase.

AU1982

April 2010
The COASTAL STAR

News 9

DOCKS & SEAWALLS

Larry Robbins

LANTANA BASED ~ OVER 30 YEARS
NEW CONSTRUCTION • REPAIRS
LEAKING SEAWALLS • BOATLIFTS
561-582-0532 ~ OFFICE
FAX: 561-582-3289 • EMAIL: DOCKMAN@AOL.COM

UGAS

Wool & Fabric

SPECIALIZING IN REPAIRS
• FULL SIZE & COMFORTERS
• TOWELS & SHEETS
• CLOTHESLINE & BEDSPREADS

561-353-7121

In-Home Island MAassage

Tara Fitzpatrick
75 Minutes - $75
561-574-2569
patriciapearl@gmail.com
Lic# MA 27463

Seniors: The insurability of your healthy lifestyle remains unrelated to the recent declines in stocks, bonds and real estate. Let us show you how to leverage this valuable marketable asset through the premium financing of additional life insurance or the sale of an existing policy to the open market.

TSS GROUP
561.247.5540
Tss.grp@gmail.com
www.tricoastgroup.com

Remodeling & New Construction

Boyd Stuart Bogess, Inc.

State-certified general contractor
777 East Atlantic Avenue • Delray Beach, FL 33483
License # CGC00433
(561) 245-1193 • boydo@yoyo.org
The Good Life.

Now available daily.

To get more out of life, discover whether you’re getting what you need from your assets. Let us show you:

› The advantages of having a financial plan in sync with your life plan
› How your assets can work together to help you meet your goals.

Brian Lee
Vice-President Wealth Management Financial Advisor

Troy Wheat
Vice-President Wealth Management Financial Advisor

Jay Rowley
Vice-President Wealth Management Financial Advisor

55 NE 5th Avenue, Suite 400
Delray Beach FL 33483
(561) 272-2053

MorganStanley
SmithBarney

©2010 Morgan Stanley Smith Barney LLC. Member SIPC.

Neighborhood party

While some of the kids played games (above), Hypoluxo Island’s Joseph Conti concentrated on his fiddle while performing with father Joe and other musicians at the annual Hypoluxo Island Property Owners Picnic. Photos by Jerry Lower

Hypoluxo Island/Lantana

Neighbors, town see solution for playground

By Margie Plunkett and Mary Kate Leming

McKinley Park on Hypoluxo Island has been a meeting ground, a community “piazza” that’s brought parents and children together over the years to bond and play. A main draw for families, the playground equipment is now gone, removed without notice or hope of replacement after town inspectors deemed it a safety hazard.

Lantana doesn’t have the money budgeted for the estimated replacement cost of the $50,000 play units. Town Manager Mike Bornstein said at a council meeting in March. But is hoping to find a sweeter set for McKinley Park that has a price tag of about $5,000.

The equipment, up to an estimated 12 to 15 years old, deteriorated in the harsh environment of salt air and sand and was beyond saving, said Lantana Director of Operations Mike Greenstein.

The attachments as well as the framework were cracked, rusted and dissolving, he said. “It couldn’t be repaired. It was not an option.”

Parents and neighbors, caught by surprise when the equipment was scrapped, protested at a Town Council meeting in March, unhappy that they weren’t notified the equipment was unsafe or would be removed and not replaced. “It was there one day, gone the next,” said neighbor Diana Reed during a later interview. “It was just done so haphazardly, never giving us the opportunity to do anything about it until it was too late. I think the decision was a mistake.” Reed spoke passionately during the meeting about just how important the playground was for the children — including her now-11-year-old son — and in fostering a sense of community and camaraderie among young parents. Some of her son’s best friendships were formed at play in the park and her family made close friends, Reed said.

The real estate agent added that amenities like playground equipment bolster property values as well.

Bornstein apologized at the meeting for not notifying the neighborhood and Mayor David Stewart suggested grant money or other financial aid might be more easily found if residents initiated a grassroots effort to raise part of the funds. Judy Black, president of the Hypoluxo Island Property Owners Association, planned to bring up the possibility of fund-raising for new equipment.

Meanwhile, the lack of communication on the issue was unfortunate, Black added. “We were unaware of the situation altogether. These things happen. We usually have very good communication and are on good terms.”

Fireworks budget down, but not out

The Lantana council members voted to contract Zambelli Fireworks Manufacturing Co. for up to $25,000 to put on the July Fourth display this year, $10,000 less than budgeted.

The company will launch fireworks along the Sportsman’s Park seawall, rather than from a barge on the water, producing a savings of about 10 percent, Town Manager Mike Bornstein said at the council’s March 22 meeting. Zambelli, which has put on Lantana’s fireworks display for several years, has already tested the launch site.

Resident Bob Little wondered if this was a year to spend on fireworks, without other organizations helping to defray the cost. “It’s a lot of money spent on 20 minutes,” he said. The expense was contemplated and discussed during budget approval last year, Bornstein noted.

— Margie Plunkett

The Good

Life.

Now available daily.

To get more out of life, discover whether you’re getting what you need from your assets. Let us show you:

› The advantages of having a financial plan in sync with your life plan
› How your assets can work together to help you meet your goals.

Brian Lee
Vice-President Wealth Management Financial Advisor

Troy Wheat
Vice-President Wealth Management Financial Advisor

Jay Rowley
Vice-President Wealth Management Financial Advisor

55 NE 5th Avenue, Suite 400
Delray Beach FL 33483
(561) 272-2053

MorganStanley
SmithBarney

©2010 Morgan Stanley Smith Barney LLC. Member SIPC.
South Palm Beach

New members join green Town Council

By Tim O’Meilia

The South Palm Beach Town Council is going green. Not environmentally speaking, but experience wise.

Two new council members, Stella Jordan and Susan Lillybeck, were sworn at the March 23 Town Council meeting by U.S. District Judge Daniel T.K. Hurley, giving the council four members in their first two-year term.

Councilmen Brian Merbler and Donald Clayman completed their first-elected year in office (although Clayman was appointed three months before he was elected). Only Mayor Martin Millar has much time behind the council table. He served four years as a councilman before he was elected mayor in 2009.

But that didn’t stop the council from making two immediate, if minor, changes in town procedures. At Jordan’s suggestion, the council moved to change its monthly meeting from 7:30 p.m. to 7 p.m. And, at the mayor’s urging, the council will be called ‘council members’ individually instead of the more formal and seldom-used ‘councilors.’ Both changes were approved unanimously.

“The honeymoon begins tonight and ends tonight,” Merbler jokingly told his two new colleagues.

The March 9 election was a clear-cut win for those who opposed a 10-story condominium hotel on the site of the Palm Beach Oceanfront Inn, the only commercial property in town.

Jordan and Lillybeck hardly defeated four other first-time candidates, Iris Lieberman, Isabella Ralston-Charnley, Richard Akin and Clare Semer. Lieberman and Ralston-Charnley favored changing the town’s comprehensive plan to allow the hotel.

The Town Council turned down the proposal by a 3-2 vote in September but two of the council members opposing the change — Charles McCrosson and Joseph Flagello — did not seek re-election. McCrosson recently moved to the Florida Keys.

Jordan and Lillybeck each attracted more than 30 percent of the votes. No other candidate reached 15 percent. Almost 37 percent of the town’s 1,103 registered voters cast ballots.

You spoke loudly, clearly and decisively on election day,” Jordan told the meeting of about 75 residents. “The election confirms what the town’s comprehensive plan states.”

Jordan, a retired banker, said she would follow the voices of the town’s residents. “The residents of South Palm Beach are at the top of the organizational chart. The mayor and the council report to you.”

Lillybeck, who owns a doughnut shop in Illinois thanked the residents who worked for her election. “I can’t tell you how honored I am to be sitting here, that you chose me for this job. I will make you proud that you put me here,” she said.

In other business, he council accepted the annual audit performed by the accounting firm of MarcumRachlin. Accountant Andrew Fiernan said the town’s books showed no deficiencies and the $1.95 million in reserves “is indicative of the good financial health of the town.”

Along the Coast

By Dianna Smith

Local officials are continuing to comb the seas and beaches for Haitians fleeing their devastated country.

Though no refugees have been spotted in Palm Beach County since January’s deadly earthquake in Haiti, four Haitian nationals came ashore in Martin County on Feb. 22, reminding locals to keep an eye out for any kind of suspicious activity on the beaches.

“They don’t stop, they really don’t stop,” said Ed Greenfield, public affairs officer for the U.S. Coast Guard Lake Worth. For years, political uprising and an unstable economy has pushed Haitians to travel the rough seas to South Florida, in search of better lives. But many worry the earthquake that killed hundreds of thousands and left many more homeless may lure even more Haitians to flee in the weeks to come.

The Palm Beach County Emergency Management Center has reminded local officials of the mass migration plan that was updated just two years ago.

And the United States Coast Guard has various ships and aircrafts patrolling the seas. On Feb. 16, the coast guard intercepted a boat with 88 Haitians just 45 miles north of Haiti. All 88 were returned to Haiti. That was the first group of Haitians spotted in the waters since the earthquake, said Coast Guard Petty Officer Barry Ben.

“We’ve always have a presence to deter illegal migration,” Ben said.

Soon after the earthquake, Haitians in the United States were given the opportunity to apply for temporary protected status, which will allow the undocumented to stay in the states and work until July 2011. Of the more than 37,000 Haitians who have applied for TPS so far, 25,000 have been from Florida alone.

But those Haitians who arrive illegally in the United States after Jan. 12 do not qualify for TPS and will be sent back to Haiti.

Though Matt Chandler, deputy press secretary for the U.S. Department of Homeland Security, said officials do not see signs of a pending mass migration, a few hundred detainees were moved from the Krome detention center in Miami-Dade County in January to make room for a potential influx of Haitian refugees. The center is a place where immigrants wait for their immigration status or to be returned to their country.

Chandler called the move “simply an act of cautionary planning.”

The #1 Flooring Store in Delray Beach

Officials ready, alert to Haitian refugee potential

Serving Our Coastal Communities Since 1986

KALEEL & CROZIER
ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELORS AT LAW
Elder Law • Probate & Guardianship • Estates & Trusts • Wills • Real Estate Closings
KENNETH M. KALEEL 561-738-1104 CAROL L. CROZIER
555 N. CONGRESS AVENUE • BOYNTON BEACH, FL • WWW.KCHLEGAL.COM

BARNARDS CARPET ONE® FLOOR & HOME

30 YEARS, SAME OWNERS, SAME LOCATION
950 SW 17th Avenue
Delray Beach, FL 33444
(561) 278-3600

www.BarnardsCarpetOneDelrayBeach.com

3 FRIENDLY, KNOWLEDGEABLE, OWNER & SALES PROFESSIONALS
• 8,500 Sq. Ft. Showroom • Easy Access Warehouse
• Huge In-Stock Inventory • Easy Parking at the Front Door

The COASTAL STAR News 11
April 2010
Manalapan

Utilities, landscaping, signs and turtle-sensitive lighting occupy commission

By Margie Plunkett

Manalapan commissioners agreed to pay a company $13,550 to locate and map utility structures throughout the town, paving the way for a plan that guides residents in landscaping swales while protecting utilities.

With the utility mapping progressing, commissioners will trek to Lighthouse Point to view the work of a landscape consultant whom they are considering contracting to provide expertise on plantings.

High Tech Locating in Miami was contracted after the town struggled for nearly two months in its internal attempt to locate and map water pipes alone, devoting about $3,300 in salaries to the task. The work may take up to 60 days.

The commission also generally agreed it was interested in hiring landscape consultant Roy Rogers of Southeastern Consulting Group for up to $1,000 to provide expertise on plantings. The panel thought it premature, however, pending completion of utility mapping and their tour of Lighthouse Point.

In separate action: commissioners passed on first reading an ordinance that gives them hometown rule on turtle protection in the face of increasingly strict county restrictions, according to Mayor Tom Gerrard. The ordinance still restricts lighting that can be seen from the beach, because it interferes with turtle nesting. But the ordinance focuses on lighting that can be seen from a height of 36 inches, rather than from the six feet the county requires.

Commissioners sent a sign ordinance to the zoning board to review after residents and the real estate community complained that it forced them to place real estate sale signs behind hedges and walls where they couldn’t be seen from the street. The commissioners suspended enforcement concerning those signs pending the review.

The process of hiring a town manager was progressing: Commissioner William Bernstein was authorized to negotiate a contract in a pay range of $80,000 to $120,000 with the No. 1 candidate, Thomas Heck of Nevada, who was interviewed along with two other candidates in March. Commissioners ranked the candidates at the regular March 23 meeting and plan a discussion during an April 6 special meeting.

Finance Director Linda Stumpf updated commissioners on the progress of a fundraising drive to refurbish the town’s library. By March 23, resident contributions had reached $47,769.67. The library committee is working on bids to replace the ceiling. “It’s very heartening that the community has responded as it has,” Gerrard said. “I commend everyone who’s helped.”

Delray Beach

Beachfront group moves ahead with master planning

The Beach Property Owners Association is taking the next step toward a long-term plan for the beachfront, after meeting March 24 with city leaders, city employees and residents.

At its April 1 board meeting, the association intended to set a date to present its report and renderings to the City Commission.

The association wants to create a master plan for the beachfront to tackle residents’ concerns in the future. Planning began in November, with a successful, standing-room-only charrette where people said they were concerned about, among other things, parking, people on the beach after dark and smoking.

Since then, organizers have compiled a report and created artist renderings to show the City Commission what they envision as the beachfront in Delray Beach. No changes are expected in the near future, except the possibility of new garbage cans. But the association said it is important to have a guide for the future.

“Everyone is behind us,” said Mary Renaud, president of the BPOA.

— Kelly Wolfe
Hurricane seasons expected to pick up, but still depend on el Niño

By Tim O’Meilia

South Florida whisked past the hurricane graveyard last summer and nary a storm howled in return. Only three hurricanes formed last year and none sent anyone scurrying to Home Depot for plywood.

Don’t expect to sneak by again this year, said National Hurricane Center forecaster Chris Landsea, who said the eastern Atlantic, Caribbean Sea and Gulf of Mexico are in the midst of a 25- to 30-year uptick in storms that began in 1995.

“Do not expect things to stay quiet for the next five years,” he said.

But Landsea isn’t ready to make those fashionable predictions of how many storms we will see. The cone of destruction, predictions of how many will take aim.

“It’s too early. Those predictions aren’t worth the ink on the paper,” said Landsea, who spoke in March at the annual lecture series sponsored by the Community Affairs Advisory Board of the town of South Palm Beach. Wait until May, or better yet, August for more accurate assessments, he said.

It mostly depends on how fast el Niño weakens in the eastern Pacific Ocean and Landsea says it’s too soon to say.

El Niño is a warming of the waters off Ecuador and Peru. The warmer the Pacific, the stronger the wind shear to chop off the heads of developing storms, as happened in 2009. It’s a climatic domino effect.

El Niño made 2009 a one-year wonder. The increase of storms in the past decade is part of a multi-decade cycle last seen in the late 1920s through the early 1950s and not the result of global warming, as some scientists have suggested.

Landsea, a research meteorologist with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration until last year, is one of the authors of a study published in February that included scientists who said global warming was the cause of the increase in hurricanes.

Hurricanes are the poster child of global warming, as Al Gore sees it,” Landsea said.

“But our computer models show that there will be fewer tropical storms and hurricanes by the end of the century because of global warming — fewer but slightly stronger.”

By the numbers, the number of storms will drop by 6 percent to 34 percent by 2100. But the intensity of those that survive will increase by 2 percent to 11 percent, and there may be twice as many Category 4 and 5 storms as now.

The reason: Global warming will increase the ocean temperature, making stronger storms, but it also will cause more wind shear, decimating all but the most beefy hurricanes.

“The trouble is, there are lots more people in hurricanes’ way than there used to be,” Landsea said. “Society is making storm damage higher, not global warming.”

Hurricane Katrina, a strong Category 3 storm when it struck New Orleans in 2005, caused $81 billion in damage. In contrast, the 1926 Category 4/5 storm that struck South Florida would cause $140 billion to $157 billion in damage if it hit today, adjusted for inflation and for the influx of population.

“What’s that mean for today’s South Palm Beach condo dwellers? You’re on a barrier island. The first floor of condos could easily get flooded. Power could be out for five days. If you get the word to evacuate, do it,” Landsea said.

“We’re fortunate we can see them coming.”

THE BUNNY HIATT and JACK ELKINS COLLECTION

By the numbers, the number of storms will drop by 6 percent to 34 percent by 2100. But the intensity of those that survive will increase by 2 percent to 11 percent, and there may be twice as many Category 4 and 5 storms as now. Hurricane Katrina, a strong Category 3 storm when it struck New Orleans in 2005, caused $81 billion in damage. In contrast, the 1926 Category 4/5 storm that struck South Florida would cause $140 billion to $157 billion in damage if it hit today, adjusted for inflation and for the influx of population.

“What’s that mean for today’s South Palm Beach condo dwellers? You’re on a barrier island. The first floor of condos could easily get flooded. Power could be out for five days. If you get the word to evacuate, do it,” Landsea said.

“We’re fortunate we can see them coming.”

THE BUNNY HIATT and JACK ELKINS COLLECTION

By the numbers, the number of storms will drop by 6 percent to 34 percent by 2100. But the intensity of those that survive will increase by 2 percent to 11 percent, and there may be twice as many Category 4 and 5 storms as now. Hurricane Katrina, a strong Category 3 storm when it struck New Orleans in 2005, caused $81 billion in damage. In contrast, the 1926 Category 4/5 storm that struck South Florida would cause $140 billion to $157 billion in damage if it hit today, adjusted for inflation and for the influx of population.

“What’s that mean for today’s South Palm Beach condo dwellers? You’re on a barrier island. The first floor of condos could easily get flooded. Power could be out for five days. If you get the word to evacuate, do it,” Landsea said.

“We’re fortunate we can see them coming.”

THE BUNNY HIATT and JACK ELKINS COLLECTION

By the numbers, the number of storms will drop by 6 percent to 34 percent by 2100. But the intensity of those that survive will increase by 2 percent to 11 percent, and there may be twice as many Category 4 and 5 storms as now. Hurricane Katrina, a strong Category 3 storm when it struck New Orleans in 2005, caused $81 billion in damage. In contrast, the 1926 Category 4/5 storm that struck South Florida would cause $140 billion to $157 billion in damage if it hit today, adjusted for inflation and for the influx of population.

“What’s that mean for today’s South Palm Beach condo dwellers? You’re on a barrier island. The first floor of condos could easily get flooded. Power could be out for five days. If you get the word to evacuate, do it,” Landsea said. “We’re fortunate we can see them coming.”

THE BUNNY HIATT and JACK ELKINS COLLECTION

By the numbers, the number of storms will drop by 6 percent to 34 percent by 2100. But the intensity of those that survive will increase by 2 percent to 11 percent, and there may be twice as many Category 4 and 5 storms as now. Hurricane Katrina, a strong Category 3 storm when it struck New Orleans in 2005, caused $81 billion in damage. In contrast, the 1926 Category 4/5 storm that struck South Florida would cause $140 billion to $157 billion in damage if it hit today, adjusted for inflation and for the influx of population. "What’s that mean for today’s South Palm Beach condo dwellers? You’re on a barrier island. The first floor of condos could easily get flooded. Power could be out for five days. If you get the word to evacuate, do it,” Landsea said. “We’re fortunate we can see them coming.”

THE BUNNY HIATT and JACK ELKINS COLLECTION
Along the Coast

A spectacular sunrise paints the sky near Colonial Ridge Club in Ocean Ridge. Photo provided by Richard Ferrini

Andy Quinn poses with a black tip shark he caught surf casting off Briny Breezes beach with his father, Dr. Tony Quinn, on March 14. The Quinns were visiting family in Briny Breezes from Sheridan, Wyo. The shark was 5 feet, 10 inches long and weighed about 130 pounds. Photo provided by Bayless family

There were bargains galore when the Ocean Ridge Garden Club held its annual rummage sale at town hall on March 13. Ocean Ridge resident Christel Connolly shows a dress to her mother and husband, Jim. The sale netted more than $1,000. Photo by Jerry Lower

Thousands of Portuguese Man o’ War washed ashore near Briny Breezes in late February. Photo provided by Rachel Rickard

Artist Darlene Erickson shows off one of her paintings during the Briny Breezes Art League Art Show on March 21. Photo by Jerry Lower

For Celebrated Names in Home Furnishings, Upholstery, Accessories and Gifts...
Gulf Stream

Burying power lines would cost $4.6 million

By Margie Plunkett

Burying Gulf Stream’s overhead power lines would cost roughly $4.6 million and entail six months of pre-construction work and six to eight months of construction, according to a consultant hired to study the feasibility of the project.

Town commissioners took the next step toward burying electric lines when they directed Danny Brannon, the Brannon & Gillespie LLC consultant who presented the study results in March, to provide a more detailed report on the project.

“There’s still some questions that need to be answered, but I think we should move ahead, obtain these answers, look at the total picture and let the people decide what they want to do,” said Mayor William Koch Jr. during the March town meeting. “It’s been a long time in coming,” Vice Mayor Joan Orthwein said.

Brannon studied the area of Gulf Stream that’s east of the Intracoastal Waterway, including about 200 homes and 15 multifamily residences. The area encompasses 29,500 feet of overhead power lines and 115 Florida Power & Light Co. transformers, according to the study.

The Wellington consultant recommended that the town hire construction contractors to complete the work rather than FPL to keep control of costs, time and other factors.

Gulf Stream commissioners would need to consider how to finance the project, including options of taxation and sale of municipal bonds. Another community Brannon worked with on burying power lines, Jupiter Island, took a referendum to the voters, borrowed money for the project and planned to pay the loan by taxing residents, the consultant said.

“We’d probably have to go for a bond issue,” Koch said. “Gulf Stream has only had one bond issue that I could remember. It was very successful — especially for the people who bought the bonds.”

Bob Ganger, president of the Civic Association — which paid for half the cost of the feasibility study — said he planned to relay the information from the commission meeting to residents at the association’s next meeting. Most people are aware that Gulf Stream will see a return on the money in terms of safety and way of life, he said.

“The people I’ve talked to are very much in favor,” Ganger said. “They’re saying, ‘In concept I’m for it. Give me the details.’”

---

Ocean Ridge

Town looks into ‘bird sanctuary’ status

By Margie Plunkett

Herons, cranes, spoonbills, terns, pelicans and even red hawks make Ocean Ridge their home. Now, the town is moving toward becoming a bird sanctuary to protect them.

The town is exploring and preparing an ordinance it expects to present at its April 5 meeting, after resident Jeff Lee proposed the designation in March.

“The bird sanctuary prevents people from killing birds or their eggs,” Lee said. “It’s just for community awareness. If you raise the awareness of birds, people will participate. It will bring out a different aspect of the town.”

The effort can be done with little or no cost to the town and without sanction from the National Audubon Society, Lee said. “We don’t have to go through anyone to do this, we just have to declare ourselves a sanctuary,” Town Manager Ken Schenck said.

“It might bring some recognition to Ocean Ridge,” Commissioner Betty Bingham said. “We’re beginning to get more and more birds, although many people don’t see them.”

The parks and mangroves provide the beginnings of a sanctuary, Bingham said, forming a habitat for a host of birds, including storks, cranes and owls. Bingham noted “two red-tailed hawks most people don’t see.”

“There are so many different varieties of birds in Ocean Ridge because we have so much different parkland,” Lee said. The town’s parks include the 12-acre Ocean Ridge Natural Area.

The town in Ohio Lee previously lived in had “bird sanctuary” on every sign, he said. Groups formed to watch the birds and people’s involvement grew, with residents leading bird walks and spearheading other activities, he recalled. “It’s a community thing.”

The parks and mangroves provide the beginnings of a sanctuary, Bingham said, forming a habitat for a host of birds, including storks, cranes and owls. Bingham noted “two red-tailed hawks most people don’t see.”

“There are so many different varieties of birds in Ocean Ridge because we have so much different parkland,” Lee said. The town’s parks include the 12-acre Ocean Ridge Natural Area.

The town in Ohio Lee previously lived in had “bird sanctuary” on every sign, he said. Groups formed to watch the birds and people’s involvement grew, with residents leading bird walks and spearheading other activities, he recalled. “It’s a community thing.”

The parks and mangroves provide the beginnings of a sanctuary, Bingham said, forming a habitat for a host of birds, including storks, cranes and owls. Bingham noted “two red-tailed hawks most people don’t see.”

“There are so many different varieties of birds in Ocean Ridge because we have so much different parkland,” Lee said. The town’s parks include the 12-acre Ocean Ridge Natural Area.

The town in Ohio Lee previously lived in had “bird sanctuary” on every sign, he said. Groups formed to watch the birds and people’s involvement grew, with residents leading bird walks and spearheading other activities, he recalled. “It’s a community thing.”

The parks and mangroves provide the beginnings of a sanctuary, Bingham said, forming a habitat for a host of birds, including storks, cranes and owls. Bingham noted “two red-tailed hawks most people don’t see.”

“There are so many different varieties of birds in Ocean Ridge because we have so much different parkland,” Lee said. The town’s parks include the 12-acre Ocean Ridge Natural Area.

The town in Ohio Lee previously lived in had “bird sanctuary” on every sign, he said. Groups formed to watch the birds and people’s involvement grew, with residents leading bird walks and spearheading other activities, he recalled. “It’s a community thing.”

---

END OF SEASON Spectacular

Once in a lifetime treasures are always hard to find, that is why we wait until the end of season to offer our most loyal customers the ultimate opportunity to purchase important jewelry at significant savings.

Join us now through Saturday, April 30 for a spectacular selection of our finest estate purchases, handcrafted jewelry, Swiss Timepieces and jeweled bezels.

PRIVATE JEWELERS

GEMOLOGISTS • JEWELERS • WATCHMAKERS • DESIGNERS

900 E. ATLANTIC AVE. • SUITE 21 • DELRAY BEACH, FL 33483

(561) 272-9800 • WWW.PRIVATEJEWELERSDELRAYBEACH.COM

---

Excentricities

30% OFF LEE UPHOLSTERY SPECIAL ORDERS MARCH 15 - APRIL 15

Just Some Of Our Unique Sale Items

14KT WHITE GOLD AND DIAMOND EAR STUDS, 3.50CTS. TOTAL WEIGHT REGULAR PRICE $20,700 .......... SALE PRICE $15,900.

ROLEX STAINLESS STEEL AIR KING REGULAR PRICE $4,200. .......... SALE PRICE $3,100.

18KT WHITE GOLD AND DIAMOND BEZEL FOR A LADIES ROLEX REGULAR PRICE $13,644. .......... SALE PRICE $7975.

PLATINUM, 1.85CT OVAL DIAMOND ENGAGEMENT RING REGULAR PRICE $21,825. .......... SALE PRICE $16,750.

PLATINUM, BAGUETTE & ROUND DIAMOND ESTATE BRACELET, 5.00CTS. APPRAISED AT $11,000./ REG. PRICE $7,500.00 .......... SALE PRICE $5,200.

Private Appointments are always welcome for buying, selling, upgrading or appraising. Plenty of easy parking.
Sandra Morrison of Ocean Ridge found a treasure trove of watercolors in Norman Scofield’s garage. Landscapes of all descriptions delightfully alive with dynamic lines and beautiful colors: tropical island scenes, snow and old barn paintings, northern vistas and local views, sunny to sad.

“There is even one of the Crest Theatre, and another of the Nomad Surf Shop,” Morrison said. “Every sky is different and unique. You feel it and it makes you feel joyful. If his skies have squalls, you feel that, too, and become apprehensive.”

Scofield, an accomplished artist and art instructor who had retired to Delray Beach in the early 1990s, died last July. He had been Morrison’s teacher and friend. When she saw his vast collection, she knew she had to keep his vision alive.

“To see all his work was just amazing and I wanted others to see it, particularly his students. I took his framed tropical scenes and hung them at Veterans Park in Delray Beach.”

When going through his work, she realized that he had been an artist all his life. “I found sketch books from when he was in grammar school. He won his first art competition when he was 7 or 8 years old,” she said.

Scofield was born in Jackson, Mich. After serving in the Air Force in World War II, he attended the Cleveland Institute of Art, which led him to a 36-year career in commercial art as an illustrator, graphic designer and art director.

After retiring, he taught at Santalucia High School, Briny Breezes Art League and the city of Boynton Beach Art Center. He painted with the children at the Milagro Center. He was a member of the Delray Art League, Palm Beach Watercolor Society and a signature member of the Florida Watercolor Society. Emily, his wife who died before him, also was active in the art community. She was treasurer for the Delray Art League, and had been chairman of its scholarship fund.

The works are priced from $75 to $250. "He had priced his watercolors much higher, but I couldn’t bear that they would be buried away,” Morrison said.
Delray Beach Board lays out plans, to expand ‘greening’ the city

By Margie Plunkett

Imagine stopping by an automated stand to rent a bicycle and being able to drop it off at a station in another part of town. The board formerly known as the Green Task Force has this on the roster of projects it wants to make reality.

The Green Task Force presented icon projects, including the public bicycle system as part of its status update to Delray Beach commissioners during a special meeting/workshop in March, as well as noting it would like to use Earth Day on April 22 as a springboard event.

The panel first, however, sought to change its name to the Delray Beach Green Implementation Advancement Board because it had progressed from its initial purpose of reviewing the city’s sustainability practices to implementing proposed changes.

To date, 70 of 122 of the board’s recommendations have been completed or are ongoing, everything from using green cleaning supplies to securing a green grant worth $638,500, the board’s chairman, Yalmaz Siddiqui, said. The list also includes an aggressive pilot recycling program, a tiered water rate structure, support of organic community gardens and work toward an electronic police citation system, he said.

The chairman, who proposed building awareness of the board’s achievements among Delray Beach residents, said the role of the board is now to advance green initiatives by engaging key stakeholders and working together to put proposals into practice.

Part of the communication plans includes collecting measurements to illustrate progress made by various programs. Metrics could include annual reclaimed water usage, average daily water usage per capita, annual kilowatts of electricity used in city facilities and the carbon footprint from city facilities and operations. The latter is already in the works: Florida Atlantic University is working on Delray Beach’s carbon footprint for free at the Green board’s request, he said.

“And having metrics publicly aggregated and disclosed will help the city save money and potential energy wastes,” Siddiqui said.

Commissioner Gary Eliopoulos agreed. “Measurements are going to be the key for us,” he said. The green board was seeking overall comments from commissioners on five proposals, including the public bicycle system, to get support or guidance on what’s next, Siddiqui said.

The public bike system improves the use of energy-saving, pollution-free transportation for both tourists and residents, according to Siddiqui. The board proposal would investigate a pilot program for Delray Beach and move forward if it is deemed “fiscally responsible,” he said.

The bike system could help alleviate traffic congestion as well as provide a revenue stream to the city, according to the presentation.

Other short-term projects include community gardens, a trolley system with eco features and environmental training opportunities. Request for bids on the trolley project were due March 15.

One longer-term project was to create an Eco District, an overlay district in Delray Beach designated in an attempt to attract green business, Siddiqui said. The city could provide incentives and adjust zoning to attract business in an innovative way and differentiate the region.

The Green Task Force has this on the roster of projects it wants to make reality. The board formerly known as the Green Task Force has this on the roster of projects it wants to make reality.
Delray Beach

RIGHT: Sporting a green moustache, firefighter John Ferguson and Capt. John Fischer tune their bagpipes. More than 1,000 firefighters took part in this year’s parade, which drew 85,000 people, organizers said.

BELOW: Kayleigh Devery enjoys a prime seat on an antique firetruck with her mother, Faith. Her father, Conor Devery, is a Delray firefighter raised in Ireland.

By Kelly Wolfe

When in doubt, walk right up to the guy in the kilt. It makes life more interesting. And in this case, it’s the best way to find the guy running things.

Capt. John Fischer of the Palm Beach County Fire Rescue Pipe and Drum Band, has spent the better part of a year collaborating with Delray Beach, bringing hundreds of firefighters from around the world here to march on Atlantic Avenue March 13, during the city’s the 42nd St. Patrick’s Day Parade salutes firefighters, fun

See PARADE on page 19

Pat Robinson carries a portrait of Maury Power, who founded the parade 28 years ago.

By Kelly Wolfe

When in doubt, walk right up to the guy in the kilt. It makes life more interesting. And in this case, it’s the best way to find the guy running things.

Capt. John Fischer of the Palm Beach County Fire Rescue Pipe and Drum Band, has spent the better part of a year collaborating with Delray Beach, bringing hundreds of firefighters from around the world here to march on Atlantic Avenue March 13, during the city’s the 42nd St. Patrick’s Day Parade salutes firefighters, fun

See PARADE on page 19

Pat Robinson carries a portrait of Maury Power, who founded the parade 28 years ago.

By Kelly Wolfe

When in doubt, walk right up to the guy in the kilt. It makes life more interesting. And in this case, it’s the best way to find the guy running things.

Capt. John Fischer of the Palm Beach County Fire Rescue Pipe and Drum Band, has spent the better part of a year collaborating with Delray Beach, bringing hundreds of firefighters from around the world here to march on Atlantic Avenue March 13, during the city’s the 42nd St. Patrick’s Day Parade salutes firefighters, fun

See PARADE on page 19

Pat Robinson carries a portrait of Maury Power, who founded the parade 28 years ago.

By Kelly Wolfe

When in doubt, walk right up to the guy in the kilt. It makes life more interesting. And in this case, it’s the best way to find the guy running things.

Capt. John Fischer of the Palm Beach County Fire Rescue Pipe and Drum Band, has spent the better part of a year collaborating with Delray Beach, bringing hundreds of firefighters from around the world here to march on Atlantic Avenue March 13, during the city’s the 42nd St. Patrick’s Day Parade salutes firefighters, fun

See PARADE on page 19

Pat Robinson carries a portrait of Maury Power, who founded the parade 28 years ago.
Annual St. Patrick’s Day Parade.

“It gives people a sense of stability in unstable times,” Fischer said, as dozens of his colleagues shined red fire engines and handed out green beads nearby. “It’s important to show unity. We’re all here on one street, on one day.”

Fischer, a firefighter 24 years, said Delray Beach honored firefighters at its St. Patrick’s Day Parade for the first time last year. Now, it’s an annual tradition.

“Absolutely,” Fischer said, when asked if he’ll be back next year.

More than an hour before the official parade kickoff, Atlantic Avenue was a festive sea of green — wigs, dresses, socks, beads, flip-flops, boas. People strolled along the avenue with dogs, strollers and emerald balloons. Women wore shamrock-shaped freckles, men donned oversized green hats.

John and Barbara Connolly live in the Bronx, but they’ve been coming to the Delray Beach St. Patrick’s Day Parade for eight years.

“It’s a nice group of people,” John Connolly said.

And it’s sunny.

“In New York it’s always snowing,” said Barbara Connolly.

The weather also lured Lt. Peter Halderman, a firefighter from Dublin, Ireland. He spent a gray, rainy day circling the airport in West Palm Beach, the day before. But now that he’s standing in the sunshine, he’s not disappointed.

“We were going to go to New York,” said the 29-year veteran. “But then we said ‘Hold on a second, New York’s too cold.’ ”

He said he’s enjoying the hospitality, and has made a lot of friends. But he isn’t quite sure he’ll remember them once he gets back to Dublin.

“Ask me tomorrow,” he said.

“Today is going to be a long day.”

Gary Sands, a paramedic on Palm Beach County’s Trauma Hawk air ambulance, had a more altruistic take on the day.

“To me, it’s giving back,” said Sands. “It’s showing the community we’re there for them.”

Joe Rodgers, an antique dealer from Wellington, brought a 1950 fire engine to ride in the parade.

“He likes to take the truck around the state, riding in parades and showing it off. “It’s not like the new ones,” he said, opening the door and giving a guest a gander inside. “The kids get on it, women get behind the wheel,” he said. “Everybody loves a firetruck.”

PARADE:

Continued from page 18
The locavore movement — that group that espouses eating foods produced closer to home — is catching on, with the benefits to farmers, cooks and the environment.

Reducing the travel time between harvest and market means fresher and more nutritious foods. Shortening the transport means cleaner air. And farmers, ranchers and small food producers who get an enthusiastic response for their products are more likely to grow more and expand — so it’s a winning proposition for all.

South Palm Beach County is lucky to have a number of outlets for fresh foods, including greenmarkets and U-picks, the unique Oceanside Greenmarket Café (where locals cook and produce foods unique to their kitchens in a business incubator program), and the community farms where the foods are packed and delivered to residents in a subscription sale.

In its 11th year, the Delray Greenmarket continues to offer a whole meal’s worth of foods at one-stop shopping on Saturdays. Held in the street on Southeast Fourth Avenue off Atlantic Avenue, it provides cooks with fresh seafoods, vegetables, produce and flowers for the tables. The second edition of the Greenmarket cookbook is out ($14.95 available at the Community Redevelopment Agency offices), with recipes that use the products at the market.

Fresh duck and chicken eggs are the latest best-seller, said Lori Nolan, greenmarket director. “We have a gal from out on 441 who calls her business ‘Laid in Delray.’ The fresh chicken and duck eggs are selling out really early every week, even though she’s bringing more each week.”

The ever-growing Ocean Avenue Greenmarket in Boynton Beach has the popular Greenmarket Café attached to it. Here, cooks share a community kitchen, and on various nights, you might get in on the now-famous snapper prepared by chef Roselaine Joseph, or taste Rima Lorenzo’s cheesecake or Earl Campbell’s smoked kingfish dip also available to buy at the market.

“We have so many amazing people here,” said Sherry Johnson, Community Caring Center director, who shepherded the project that gives a leg up to locals wanting to start a small food business or begin a culinary career.

“We have so many amazing people here,” said Sherry Johnson, Community Caring Center director, who shepherded the project that gives a leg up to locals wanting to start a small food business or begin a culinary career.

“Phillip Herman is our amazing Sunday brunch chef. Allison Zimmer does the best gourmet cookies. Athena Holmes is our resident vegan chef, Cherl Anderson has just started her juice bar and is squeezing fresh wheatgrass and others,” Johnson said. There’s Italian foods from Patty and Larry Korn, Marcia and Jim Tong are behind Mia Cosina — a Peruvian and Brazilian cuisine served in the café.

“We’re open seven days a week — and we have a happy hour, too, with appetizers from the market,” Johnson said.

As for fresh produce, the market supports the organic farm behind the Greenmarket, and they buy from local growers like Aldeman Farms, a backyard organic farmer.

“We have organic tomatoes, bok choy, green peppers — a number of other vegetables right now,” she said.

At Lake Worth’s Oceanside Farmer’s Market, vendors sell everything from cookies to cucumbers, honey to honeybells — all produced locally. A focus on “artisan” foods is here, with local bakers, grower and florists selling their products. The Saturday market continues through May in the parking lot behind John G’s in Lake Worth at A1A.

At the Girl’s Market in western Delray, strawberries are the big hit this time of year at the U-pick farm out back.

Jessica Bronner and Matt Chase of Delray Beach purchase produce from Joe Volkar at the Greenmarket Cafe in Boynton Beach. Photo by Tim Stepien

You, too, can be a ‘local-avore’

By Jan Norris

Jessica Bronner and Matt Chase of Delray Beach purchase produce from Joe Volkar at the Greenmarket Cafe in Boynton Beach. Photo by Tim Stepien

Experience Eclectic Italian Food.

For Your Dining Pleasure, Enjoy Our Art Show of Original Paintings

Cafe Frankie’s

640 East Ocean Avenue
Boynton Beach, FL 33435

651-732-3834

FREE BOTTLE of HOUSE WINE
with purchase of 2 Entrees.
Please present ad to receive special.

MONDAY, TUESDAY
WEDNESDAY
18” Pizza • $6.99
Take Out Only • Please present ad

LUNCH $5.99
SPECIALS

VOTED BEST ITALIAN RESTAURANT
in Boynton Beach,
2 Years In a Row!

BEST PIZZA IN
PALM BEACH COUNTY
The Palermo family sisters run the farm that includes U-pick vegetables, citrus and the berries, for which they're known. They've made it convenient and family friendly — the beds are raised and everyone's given a pair of scissors to clip berries neatly. The paths are lined with clean gravel, a bench-filled area is available for those who don't want to pick and there's plenty to see in the small park surrounding the rows of edibles.

Also out west is the Green Gourmet, a new cafe but also a market. Chef Joey Giansanti, formerly of Henry's, has opened the market of organics and locally grown products. On Sundays in his parking lot, he sponsors a greenmarket for local and organic growers. It’s new, but worth checking out. If you're one of the lucky ones who remembered to sign on in August, you are receiving boxes of vegetables from Green Cay Farms, a local subscription farm.

It’s a Community Supported Agriculture future project run by Nancy Roe. Residents who want fresh produce delivered buy a share of the farm in August. For 34 weeks, they benefit from her harvests at the west Boynton farm.

Boxes of mixed vegetables are delivered to your home or office. The popular program sells out every season, however, so you must reserve a subscription in August before the farm is planted. There’s no guarantee; you are partnering with Roe and whatever happens at her farm happens to your subscription (i.e., a hurricane). It’s a unique way to participate in local farming.

The latest food program is the Rise and Shine produce and grocery project run by the Boys & Girls Club in Delray Beach. For $30, those in need can pick up bags of fresh produce, staples and prepared foods twice a month. Rorabeck's Produce supports the program that kicked off in early March with a grant from the Quantum Foundation.

Lottie Gatewood, director of development for the youth group, says teens from the Boys and Girls Club help run it, with adult support. "Our goal is to give a hand up — not a hand out," she said.

Buying local supports our area agriculture and food producers, but the winner is truly the cook, who's getting the freshest foods available. Flavors are more intense and even if they're not "pretty" and "perfect," their flavor and nutrients will win you over.

Jan Norris is a freelance food writer and editor. For more recipes for seasonal produce, log on to JanNorris.com

If You Go

Delray Beach Greenmarket: Along Southeast Fourth Avenue, south of Atlantic Avenue, Saturdays, 8 a.m.-1 p.m. through May

Ocean Avenue Green Market and Cafe: 129 E Ocean Ave., Boynton Beach. Greenmarket open Friday-Sunday, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.; Cafe and marketplace open for lunch and dinner, Monday-Saturday, 11 a.m. to 10 p.m.; Sunday, brunch only, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Green Gourmet: 16950 Jog Road (Shoppes of Addison Place), Delray Beach. (561) 455-2466. Open Monday-Saturday, 11 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Sunday, 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Greenmarket, Sunday: 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Oceanside Farmer’s Market: AIA at Lake Avenue (behind John G.), Lake Worth. Hours: Saturdays, 8 a.m.-1 p.m.

Rise and Shine Food Co-op: Naomi Donnelly Boys and Girls Club, 1945 S. Swinton St., Delray Beach. Distribution first and third Saturdays of the month; orders due Thursday before Saturday pick-up. For information: (561) 279-0251.

The History of Ocean Apple Estate

Capturing picturesque ocean views, tucked away in tropical seclusion, this vintage jewel is a much-admired treasure of the Cape. Its grandeur and charm are unsurpassed. Ocean Apple has a unique and separate Treehouse Office with a Bedroom loft.

The Grounds and Residence

Listed on the local Historic Register and featured in numerous architectural publications, the captivating oceanfront compound boasts massive, mature gumbo-limbo trees and 75-year-old sea grape trees. The grounds feature a 1/4 mile butterfly path that serpentine through jungle-like flora and fauna. The property features inviting docks and terraces with a lovely swimming pool, sunken spa and exercise sauna.

With 200 feet fronting the Atlantic Ocean and 800 feet in depth, the distinguished property represents the rarest of oceanfront compounds. Significant expansion, renovation or development could be pursued.

The Treehouse Office has spectacular ocean views. It has a shower, bathroom, sink, air-conditioning, hardwood floors, cedar walls, bamboo desk, loft with a king size bed and a flat screen TV, and suspension bridge that connects to the master bedroom of the main house.

The Living Room of Ocean Apple’s main house opens through French doors to a deck overlooking the pool and tropical gardens.

Complete with a wet bar, the Dining Room opens to a delightful Veranda for outdoor dining. The fully equipped kitchen adjoins a Florida Room with wood burning fireplace.

The 2nd level Master Bedroom Suite commands full ocean vistas and features a private Bath, walk-in Closets and private Balcony. Offered at $6,400,000 www.OceanAppleEstate.com

Gino Cicerchia • +1-561-512-2873 • gino.cicerchia@engelvoelkers.com
David Reback • +1-561-313-7762 • david.reback@engelvoelkers.com

277A South Ocean Blvd. • Manalapan, FL 33462 • Telephone 1-561-588-1510
www.engelvoelkers.com/manalapan • Finest Real Estate

The compound, consisting of the main house and two charming Guest Cottages, contains a total of 5,423+/- square feet with 7 bedrooms, 7.5 baths and a separate 2-car garage and storage building. Ocean Apple has a unique and separate Treehouse Office with a Bedroom loft.

Ocean Apple Estate is set upon 2.35+/- lush acres, with 200 breathtaking feet fronting the Atlantic Ocean.
Delray Beach

Ogren’s designs defined early Delray

By Christine Davis

If you want to learn first hand about Samuel Ogren Sr. [1899-1988], known as the “father of Delray Beach architecture,” you have a chance over the next two months to come look at his work and hear about him from people, who studied him, knew him or live in his houses.

A three-month program that runs through May is being presented by the Delray Beach Historical Society and funded by a Florida Humanities Council and National Endowment of the Humanities grant. The program includes three one-month-long exhibits as well as three evening discussions.

The first program, held at the Sandoway House Nature Center — an Ogren-designed home built in 1936 — was educing while fostering a sense of community. The March 11 open discourse was moderated by the historical society's archivist, Dottie Patterson, with panelists Roy Simon and Roger Cope, both local architects. Members of the audience, which included Ogren's son-in-law, family friends and owners of Ogren's homes, were also invited to share stories and insights. Patterson said she learned about Sam Ogren years ago.

“When I started at Cason and insights. I would look at the

Cottage, I would look at the

What we have lost.”

“The idea of a home, where they planned to live for many years, has changed into the house as an investment that might be flipped. ... It’s interesting to think about what we have lost.”

If you go

The second exhibit, currently underway, is at Delray Beach City Hall in the Planning and Zoning Lobby, 100 NW First St., and runs through April. Ogren Designs of the Past: Planning for the Future, will be held at Delray Beach City Hall at 6:30 pm on April 29. The May 4-29 exhibition is at the Ethel Sterner Williams Learning Center, 111 N. Swinton Ave.

Ogren — Green Themes: What We Can Learn, also at the Learning Center, is scheduled for 6:30 pm on May 20.

Information: 274-9578
On a recent day, the sun glittered on the Intracoastal Waterway outside James Gardner’s Ocean Ridge home, where he lives with his wife of 45 years and their sociable black poodle. It is a comfortable and well-appointed abode, but with his collection of African sculpture and masks on loan for Black History Month to Tequesta’s Lighthouse Center for the Arts, the place feels empty, he said.

He opened the door to a cabinet that is usually home to the pieces, where a smoky aroma lingered still.

“Can you smell it?” he asked. “The smell of Africa.”

Africa is the setting for his just-published novel, The Lion Killer — the first in a projected “Dark Continent Chronicles” trilogy — and it is a place he knows well. He has visited an estimated 25 times since first setting foot in Zimbabwe (then Rhodesia) in 1968.

Gardner, 66, who made his living as a senior vice president at Smith Barney Palm Beach County, wrote the book to draw attention to the changes he has seen unfold in Africa since his first visit. They show the effects of misguided aid policies, he says, “that make systemic problems out of temporary solutions.”

A history reader who can reel off statistics of America’s slave trade, Civil War and Great Society programs, Gardner also keeps himself occupied flying seaplanes, sailing, scuba diving, fishing — and returning to Africa.

Taking a break from work on his second novel in the series, set for completion later this year, Gardner talked to The Coastal Star about what the rest of the world can learn from Africa, why foreigners can’t solve the continent’s problems and why he can’t stop going back.

— Antigone Barton

Q: Where did you go to school?
A: I’ve lived here all my life. I went to Delray Elementary School at Old School Square — 32 East. It was hot then, no air-conditioning. I went to Seacrest High School, University of Kentucky and Florida Atlantic University. I majored in anthropology.

Q: What prompted your first trip to Africa?
A: Majoring in anthropology. You have to see for yourself. Then there’s always something new to see. It’s like skin-diving, it’s different every time.

Q: What is your favorite country in Africa, and why?
A: Zimbabwe. I’ve watched the country go through this terrible metamorphosis over the last 29 years. The unemployment rate now is 94 percent. The life expectancy for a woman is 37 and for a man is 39. I’m painting a very bleak picture, so you might say it’s what’s so great about it?

The people have such tremendous resilience. And it’s refreshing to get away from the twitting and Paris Hilton … and political talk shows. It’s refreshing to get back to the basics of life. It’s like going back in history.

Q: What is the biggest difference between politics in Africa and here?
A: We’ve had a little bump in our history with the Civil War but it involved the same people with different philosophies on two issues — secession and slavery. How would you like to run the Congo with 70 different languages spoken? It’s easy to exploit people when they really have a deep-seated hatred for each other. Africa has 53 countries. They may need 250 countries. Remember we’re the ones who carved that up, we put those people together.

Q: Why don’t more people know about what works in Africa?
A: We are obsessed with death. They value life. We see death in the abstract. They see it every day. It permeates their society. If someone dies, they clean the body. They’re not as fearful of death as we are. Another difference, the Shona people (a tribe from Zimbabwe) revere the elderly. Most Africa in do. The Shona believe the ancestors speak to the elderly and that’s why they take care of their elders. Why would you put your smartest people in a nursing home? We take our old people and we put them out.

The San (tribe located primarily in Botswana) are bush people. You’ll never see a crying San baby. Someone will pick it up. It’s a communal society.

Q: When were you last in Africa and when are you going back?
A: I last went two years ago. I’m going in September this year. I don’t know where else I’m going this time, but I have to go to Zimbabwe, because I have friends there.

Q: What are people doing right in Africa?
A: We’ve had a little bump in our history with the Civil War but it involved the same people with different philosophies on two issues — secession and slavery. How would you like to run the

Q: What do you miss from the United States when you are there?
A: I miss from it. I miss the people. I really like the people.

Q: What do you miss from Africa?
A: The simplicity of it. I miss the people. I really like the people.

Q: What do you miss from the United States when you are there?
A: We’re obsessed with death. They value life. We see death in the abstract. They see it every day. It permeates their society. If someone dies, they clean the body. They’re not as fearful of death as we are. Another difference, the Shona people (a tribe from Zimbabwe) revere the elderly. Most Africa in do. The Shona believe the ancestors speak to the elderly and that’s why they take care of their elders. Why would you put your smartest people in a nursing home? We take our old people and we put them out.

The San (tribe located primarily in Botswana) are bush people. You’ll never see a crying San baby. Someone will pick it up. It’s a communal society.

Q: What are people doing right in Africa?
A: We’ve had a little bump in our history with the Civil War but it involved the same people with different philosophies on two issues — secession and slavery. How would you like to run the

Q: When were you last in Africa and when are you going back?
A: I last went two years ago. I’m going in September this year. I don’t know where else I’m going this time, but I have to go to Zimbabwe, because I have friends there.

Q: What do you miss from the United States when you are there?
A: We’re obsessed with death. They value life. We see death in the abstract. They see it every day. It permeates their society. If someone dies, they clean the body. They’re not as fearful of death as we are. Another difference, the Shona people (a tribe from Zimbabwe) revere the elderly. Most Africa in do. The Shona believe the ancestors speak to the elderly and that’s why they take care of their elders. Why would you put your smartest people in a nursing home? We take our old people and we put them out.

The San (tribe located primarily in Botswana) are bush people. You’ll never see a crying San baby. Someone will pick it up. It’s a communal society.

Q: What do you miss from Africa?
A: The simplicity of it. I miss the people. I really like the people.

Q: What do you miss from the United States when you are there?
A: We’re obsessed with death. They value life. We see death in the abstract. They see it every day. It permeates their society. If someone dies, they clean the body. They’re not as fearful of death as we are. Another difference, the Shona people (a tribe from Zimbabwe) revere the elderly. Most Africa in do. The Shona believe the ancestors speak to the elderly and that’s why they take care of their elders. Why would you put your smartest people in a nursing home? We take our old people and we put them out.

The San (tribe located primarily in Botswana) are bush people. You’ll never see a crying San baby. Someone will pick it up. It’s a communal society.

Q: What do you miss from Africa?
A: The simplicity of it. I miss the people. I really like the people.

Q: What do you miss from the United States when you are there?
A: We’re obsessed with death. They value life. We see death in the abstract. They see it every day. It permeates their society. If someone dies, they clean the body. They’re not as fearful of death as we are. Another difference, the Shona people (a tribe from Zimbabwe) revere the elderly. Most Africa in do. The Shona believe the ancestors speak to the elderly and that’s why they take care of their elders. Why would you put your smartest people in a nursing home? We take our old people and we put them out.

The San (tribe located primarily in Botswana) are bush people. You’ll never see a crying San baby. Someone will pick it up. It’s a communal society.

Q: What do you miss from Africa?
A: The simplicity of it. I miss the people. I really like the people.

Q: What do you miss from the United States when you are there?
A: We’re obsessed with death. They value life. We see death in the abstract. They see it every day. It permeates their society. If someone dies, they clean the body. They’re not as fearful of death as we are. Another difference, the Shona people (a tribe from Zimbabwe) revere the elderly. Most Africa in do. The Shona believe the ancestors speak to the elderly and that’s why they take care of their elders. Why would you put your smartest people in a nursing home? We take our old people and we put them out.

The San (tribe located primarily in Botswana) are bush people. You’ll never see a crying San baby. Someone will pick it up. It’s a communal society.

Q: What do you miss from Africa?
A: The simplicity of it. I miss the people. I really like the people.

Q: What do you miss from the United States when you are there?
A: We’re obsessed with death. They value life. We see death in the abstract. They see it every day. It permeates their society. If someone dies, they clean the body. They’re not as fearful of death as we are. Another difference, the Shona people (a tribe from Zimbabwe) revere the elderly. Most Africa in do. The Shona believe the ancestors speak to the elderly and that’s why they take care of their elders. Why would you put your smartest people in a nursing home? We take our old people and we put them out.

The San (tribe located primarily in Botswana) are bush people. You’ll never see a crying San baby. Someone will pick it up. It’s a communal society.

Q: What do you miss from Africa?
A: The simplicity of it. I miss the people. I really like the people.

Q: What do you miss from the United States when you are there?
A: We’re obsessed with death. They value life. We see death in the abstract. They see it every day. It permeates their society. If someone dies, they clean the body. They’re not as fearful of death as we are. Another difference, the Shona people (a tribe from Zimbabwe) revere the elderly. Most Africa in do. The Shona believe the ancestors speak to the elderly and that’s why they take care of their elders. Why would you put your smartest people in a nursing home? We take our old people and we put them out.

The San (tribe located primarily in Botswana) are bush people. You’ll never see a crying San baby. Someone will pick it up. It’s a communal society.

Q: What do you miss from Africa?
A: The simplicity of it. I miss the people. I really like the people.

Q: What do you miss from the United States when you are there?
A: We’re obsessed with death. They value life. We see death in the abstract. They see it every day. It permeates their society. If someone dies, they clean the body. They’re not as fearful of death as we are. Another difference, the Shona people (a tribe from Zimbabwe) revere the elderly. Most Africa in do. The Shona believe the ancestors speak to the elderly and that’s why they take care of their elders. Why would you put your smartest people in a nursing home? We take our old people and we put them out.

The San (tribe located primarily in Botswana) are bush people. You’ll never see a crying San baby. Someone will pick it up. It’s a communal society.

Q: What do you miss from Africa?
A: The simplicity of it. I miss the people. I really like the people.

Q: What do you miss from the United States when you are there?
Club, Sailfish Club and the Bath & Tennis in Palm Beach and Manalapan’s other swanky club, La Coquille.

According to the brochure promoting The Manalapan Club at the time, members were provided “a full round of social activities including dancing, gala balls, fashion shows, lectures, bridge, game instruction and tournaments.” Hotel service was available as well. Guest suites, with views of the lake or the golf course, were air-conditioned for heat or cooling. Many had private terraces and fireplaces.

“This club was largely people who bought houses here,” Benjamin recalls. There were no initiation fees, just annual dues of $400. Others were permitted to join, too, as long as the membership committee voted them in. It took two years to get "This (club) was largely aristocratic European family. Consuelo married into an aristocratic family. Her husband was the 9th Duke of Marlborough, making her the Duchess of Marlborough. Her dominating mother, Alva, arranged the match. After the pair divorced in 1926, Consuelo reconciled with her mother (the house’s namesake) and found true love with French balloonist Col. Jacques Balsan. During the height of the Great Depression in 1934, the Balsans bought the south end of Hypoluxo Island and three nearby islands for $75,000. There already was a home on the 50-acre property. It was called La Linda and it had belonged to the John Demarest family.

The Balsans tapped noted Palm Beach architect Maurice Fatio, the same man who had designed Harold Vanderbilt’s home, to turn their love nest into a fabulous romantic mansion. Fatio had his work cut out for him because the house had to be renovated to include the couple’s priceless collection of exquisite 18th- and 19th-century hand-carved French wood paneling. Collected from churches, castles and manor houses before the destruction of World War II, the paneling varied in height so the ceiling varied, as well. The wilderness mansion’s north wing became the bedroom wing and the south wing housed servants. The old garage area, with its cypress ceiling, became a living room. As Fatio’s work continued, all that remained of the original structure was a stucco tower.

The Balsans’ attention to detail and a family friend and cousin of Consuelo’s first husband, visited Casa Alva several times and often spent his time painting scenes around the grounds. A print of one of his paintings of the pool still has a place of honor above the door in the library. Churchill came to Casa Alva in 1946 in route to Fulton, Mo., to deliver his Iron Curtain speech at Westminster College.

"I like to say he was polishing it up here,” Benjamin reflects. Consuelo’s son Albert, the 10th Duke of Marlborough, visited Casa Alva frequently, as well.

Life at the club
The Manalapan Club’s brochure gives a glimpse into life there:

Primarily a social club, it provides relaxation amid sumptuous surroundings. The blue salon, a large, delicately paneled room with a wood-burning marble fireplace and two book-lined walls, is furnished with cozy groupings of comfortable chairs where cocktails and conversation are welcome. The adjacent smaller game room and the gold room are inviting and a bit more intimate. The cocktail lounge and the pink and green dining rooms possess a charm of their own. The loggia and terrace are the out-of-doors and under-the-stars setting for many club events.

"The ladies played bridge, and outside there was the nine-hole, par-3 golf course," Benjamin remembers. "Children came for the pool and to take lessons from the tennis pro, who had a top-notch reputation."

Special outings were part of the merriment, as is evident in this account in the April 1964, issue of The Palm Beach Daily News:

The Paddleboat Queen steamed into the Manalapan Club yacht docks on the South of Hypoluxo Island on Saturday evening and picked up a gay group of club members, marking the final gala event of a busy Season. … The spring cruise has become almost a tradition at the Club.

"We had a wonderful French chef who had been the pastry chef at the Gulf Stream Club," Benjamin, town mayor from 2002 to 2008, says. "There were big New Year’s Eve parties, awards dinners for golf and tennis, and quite a few weddings. I myself performed three weddings here, although that was after the club closed and I was the mayor."

Thirty-four years ago, Manalapan didn’t have a Town Hall, so commissioners held their meeting in Casa Alva’s main drawing room. Benjamin rented a former butler’s room to the town manager. A building on the property was used for the town library.

After the National Enquirer moved to Lantana in 1971, media mogul and Manalapan resident Generoso Pope made a habit of bringing his editors to the club for lunch.

"He (Pope) was very pleasant to me," Benjamin remembers. "I got him to serve on the board at JFK Hospital. He never said boo at board meetings, but then there would be a check for $1 million now and then."

By 1976, Benjamin determined it was time to raise the annual dues by $100. When members resisted, he closed the club for good.

"A lot of residents were business executives, a lot of them were from steel companies and their stocks sank in the ‘70s after a bad economic time," Benjamin recalls. "In a way, I wished I had kept it open. It gave more of a sense of community to this part of our town."

Benjamin, who had lived in a large Point Manalapan home overlooking Manatee Cove, moved into Casa Alva after the club closed. His current wife, Maura, handled the interior design, making the 23,000-square-foot manse more light and airy.

In 1961, Benjamin added the newest and oldest member of the club when he added a ship’s figurehead known to be at least 140 years old as a focal point above the fireplace in the club’s new cocktail lounge.

"The club was being, I would say, modernized," Benjamin says. "I had a new air conditioning system installed and the kitchens were updated in the home, with its eight bedrooms (including two master suites), eight bathrooms, a stunning pair of wrought-iron-embellished staircases, and even a basement for storage. The house, on five acres of land with 500 feet on the water, even has a special closet for hats, a silver vault, and an elevator to the second floor for those who don’t want to tackle the stairs. Apart from the main house, there’s a four-car garage, pool, and a one-bedroom lakefront cottage camouflaged out over the lake.

"This is a very amiable house," Benjamin says. "It’s a lovely house to be in, a peaceful house, really a joy." But now the couple is ready to downsize.

"The Benjamins have the house listed with Diana Reed of Illustrated Properties for $13.5 million. "We’ve entertained the high and mighty," Benjamin says. "Now we’re getting older and it’s time to simplify."

Mary Thurwachter is a West Palm Beach freelance writer and founder/producer of INNsiderFlorida.com.

Par 3 Golf Course

Visit the newly renovated Par 3 Golf Course, designed by Hall of Famer Raymond Floyd. Offering 6 holes with views of the ocean and 3 holes with views of the Intracoastal Waterway.

Sea Laurel Construction

Specializing in Historic Restoration, Custom Homes, Additions & Remodels

Ed Paez, G.C. Lic. #CGC060944 Serving South Florida for more than 20 years!

For more information, please visit us at www.sealaurel.com or call 561-702-5546
Along the Coast

Talented preteen designs for dolls with Earth in mind

By Linda Haase

When Amanda Jean got her first Barbie doll, she had no desire to play with it. Her first instinct was to design a new wardrobe for the model-thin fashion icon.

She used any material she could find, including her own clothes, but after a few years it was apparent this wasn’t a passing whim and her mom beseeched her to find other fabric for her creations.

“So I thought, I’ll use toilet paper because it is biodegradable and good for the Earth,” says the 12-year-old Gulf Stream School student, who started her design career when she was 4.

Using her imagination — and toilet paper by the carload — she creates detailed wedding dresses, beautiful ball gowns, haughty halter dresses, billowing skirts, striking bikinis and more for Barbies and pants, shirts, tuxedos and swim trunks for Kens. Then she washes, cuts, dyes, and styles their hair (with everything from gel to a flat iron) and poses them for photo shoots.

The dolls all have names. There’s Aphrodite, a sexy brunette sporting a revealing dress. And Natalie, who is lounging in a pool (a plastic container with dyed water). And Jean, named after her creator, who says “she has sparkle, like me.”

Amanda Jean’s family requested their last name not be used.

“Amanda Jean’s creations caught the eye of Joe Davis, owner of Delray Art & Frame Center, who was hired to enlarge and frame her photos. He offered to exhibit the photos at a show at his Atlantic Avenue shop. ’I believe she is a brilliant designer. This is someone who has astonishing ideas about how to make designs,’ he said. Although the March exhibit was Amanda Jean’s first solo show, she was in her element on opening night. Decked out in a beaded pink dress and a sparkling tiara, she explained her creations to visitors, pausing to take a demure sip of a Shirley Temple on the rocks.

As for Amanda Jean’s future plans? “I hope to make recyclable dresses out of a fabric that would be good for the environment. When you have a dress and it doesn’t fit anymore and you throw it away, it is such a waste,” she said.

Oh, and the blue-eyed blonde also wants to be a model, a singer and an actress.
Note: Not all Summer Camp schedules have been set. Please check back next month for additional information as it becomes available. Summer Camps listed below are not approved camps and/or are not listed, please send your information to theAhtanahTohenu@gmail.com.

Close to Home

Camp Wilderness: 1618 S.W. 3rd St., Boca Raton. Ages 6-12, $475 per week. Out of the wild weeklong camp offering. Registration fee is $155 per week. Before camp care until 5:30 pm is $35/week. 582-0215 or www.wildernesscamps.com.

Tie Dye ~ much more... (561) 737-2600

Armoarty Center Summer Camp: 300 S. Sapodilla Ave., West Palm Beach. Age 6-11. Dance, music, theater, communications, and visual arts. 8 am-4 pm. M-Th. 6915-7800. Registration at noon-4 pm May 1. $650-7800 or www.armoartycenter.org.

Arts Camp at Boynton Beach School of the Arts: 22481 S. Ocean Blvd., Boynton Beach. Age 6-11. $75/week. In-person registration before May 1. 694-2330 or www.artschools.com.

Arts: 300 S. Sapodilla Ave., West Palm Beach. Ages 5-11. $175/week. Includes all equipment. 549-2200 or www.thebreakers.com/summer.
By Emily J. Minor

OBITUARIES

Patricia Wade Owen

By Ron Hayes

CARL GAUER

March 6 of pneumonia after a long battle with Parkinson’s disease.

"So many people have come by and said nobody inspired them like my brother," said Mr. Gauer’s sister-in-law, June Kaiser. “He would go on trips, to Canada or the Four Corners, and trudge along with his walker.”

Born in Elizabeth, N.J., on Aug. 10, 1929, Mr. Gauer was a graduate of Linden High School. He served as a Navy corporal during the Korean War, and attended Union College in Schenectady. Mr. Gauer and his wife, Joan, began vacationing in Briny Breezes in 1978 and moved here permanently in 1998, after his retirement from Exxon Research & Engineering, where he worked as a photolithographer and production coordinator.

He also served as a head usher at the Briny Breezes Community Church and was active in the town’s annual charity bazaar.

In addition to Joan Samer Gauer, who died 20 years ago, Mr. Gauer is survived by two sisters, Nancy Boczon and Judith Kaiser, both of New York; two sisters, Jeffrey, of Somerset, N.J., and Glenn, of Brick, N.J.; a brother-in-law, Fred Kaiser, of Briny Breezes; two sons, Jeffrey, of Somerset, N.J., and Glenn, of Brick, N.J.; a brother-in-law, Fred Kaiser, of Briny Breezes; a daughter-in-law Vickiernae Gauer; and a granddaughter, Crystal Evelyn Gauer.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to the South Palm Beach County chapter of the National Parkinson Foundation, PO Box 880145, Boca Raton, FL 33488-0145. A memorial service will be scheduled later.

By Emily J. Minor

MARY E. CANNON

OCEAN RIDGE — Mary Ellen Cannon, who raised her mother never publicly disclosed her age, always just saying she was “old enough.”

After the couple’s retirement, Mrs. Cannon spent even more time working in the yard — something for which she had an incredible knack.

“My dad called her the Picasso of the garden,” said K.T.

She loved to travel and would “go anywhere at the drop of the hat,” her daughter said.

Born in Providence, R.I., she graduated from Beverly Hills High School and then attended Stanford University in California. She married George W. Cannon Jr. on St. Patrick’s Day in 1954.

The couple lived in his hometown of Muskegon, Mich., and raised their six children at their home on Mona Lake. After the kids were out of the house, the couple moved to Ocean Ridge in the early 1980s, said Cannon-Eger.

Mrs. Cannon was a member of St. Mark Catholic Church in Boynton Beach and attended Mass several times a week, her daughter said.

Besides her husband, George, survivors include their six children: Cannon-Eger, Christine Cannon Buchar, Kiki Cannon, Carolyn Cannon, George W. Cannon and Timothy James Cannon. She also leaves 12 grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

Mass was said March 13 at St. Mark’s, and there will be a service for family and friends in Muskegon later this summer, said her daughter.

Mary Ellen Cannon

By Emily J. Minor

OCEAN RIDGE — Mary Ellen Cannon, who raised her mother never publicly disclosed her age, always just saying she was “old enough.”

After the couple’s retirement, Mrs. Cannon spent even more time working in the yard — something for which she had an incredible knack.

“My dad called her the Picasso of the garden,” said K.T.

She loved to travel and would “go anywhere at the drop of the hat,” her daughter said.

Born in Providence, R.I., she graduated from Beverly Hills High School and then attended Stanford University in California. She married George W. Cannon Jr. on St. Patrick’s Day in 1954.

The couple lived in his hometown of Muskegon, Mich., and raised their six children at their home on Mona Lake. After the kids were out of the house, the couple moved to Ocean Ridge in the early 1980s, said Cannon-Eger.

Mrs. Cannon was a member of St. Mark Catholic Church in Boynton Beach and attended Mass several times a week, her daughter said.

Besides her husband, George, survivors include their six children: Cannon-Eger, Christine Cannon Buchar, Kiki Cannon, Carolyn Cannon, George W. Cannon and Timothy James Cannon. She also leaves 12 grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

Mass was said March 13 at St. Mark’s, and there will be a service for family and friends in Muskegon later this summer, said her daughter.

Mary Ellen Cannon

By Emily J. Minor

OCEAN RIDGE — Mary Ellen Cannon, who raised her mother never publicly disclosed her age, always just saying she was “old enough.”

After the couple’s retirement, Mrs. Cannon spent even more time working in the yard — something for which she had an incredible knack.

“My dad called her the Picasso of the garden,” said K.T.

She loved to travel and would “go anywhere at the drop of the hat,” her daughter said.

Born in Providence, R.I., she graduated from Beverly Hills High School and then attended Stanford University in California. She married George W. Cannon Jr. on St. Patrick’s Day in 1954.

The couple lived in his hometown of Muskegon, Mich., and raised their six children at their home on Mona Lake. After the kids were out of the house, the couple moved to Ocean Ridge in the early 1980s, said Cannon-Eger.

Mrs. Cannon was a member of St. Mark Catholic Church in Boynton Beach and attended Mass several times a week, her daughter said.

Besides her husband, George, survivors include their six children: Cannon-Eger, Christine Cannon Buchar, Kiki Cannon, Carolyn Cannon, George W. Cannon and Timothy James Cannon. She also leaves 12 grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

Mass was said March 13 at St. Mark’s, and there will be a service for family and friends in Muskegon later this summer, said her daughter.

Mary Ellen Cannon

By Emily J. Minor

OCEAN RIDGE — Mary Ellen Cannon, who raised her mother never publicly disclosed her age, always just saying she was “old enough.”

After the couple’s retirement, Mrs. Cannon spent even more time working in the yard — something for which she had an incredible knack.

“My dad called her the Picasso of the garden,” said K.T.

She loved to travel and would “go anywhere at the drop of the hat,” her daughter said.

Born in Providence, R.I., she graduated from Beverly Hills High School and then attended Stanford University in California. She married George W. Cannon Jr. on St. Patrick’s Day in 1954.

The couple lived in his hometown of Muskegon, Mich., and raised their six children at their home on Mona Lake. After the kids were out of the house, the couple moved to Ocean Ridge in the early 1980s, said Cannon-Eger.

Mrs. Cannon was a member of St. Mark Catholic Church in Boynton Beach and attended Mass several times a week, her daughter said.

Besides her husband, George, survivors include their six children: Cannon-Eger, Christine Cannon Buchar, Kiki Cannon, Carolyn Cannon, George W. Cannon and Timothy James Cannon. She also leaves 12 grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

Mass was said March 13 at St. Mark’s, and there will be a service for family and friends in Muskegon later this summer, said her daughter.

Mary Ellen Cannon

By Emily J. Minor

OCEAN RIDGE — Mary Ellen Cannon, who raised her mother never publicly disclosed her age, always just saying she was “old enough.”

After the couple’s retirement, Mrs. Cannon spent even more time working in the yard — something for which she had an incredible knack.

“My dad called her the Picasso of the garden,” said K.T.

She loved to travel and would “go anywhere at the drop of the hat,” her daughter said.

Born in Providence, R.I., she graduated from Beverly Hills High School and then attended Stanford University in California. She married George W. Cannon Jr. on St. Patrick’s Day in 1954.

The couple lived in his hometown of Muskegon, Mich., and raised their six children at their home on Mona Lake. After the kids were out of the house, the couple moved to Ocean Ridge in the early 1980s, said Cannon-Eger.

Mrs. Cannon was a member of St. Mark Catholic Church in Boynton Beach and attended Mass several times a week, her daughter said.

Besides her husband, George, survivors include their six children: Cannon-Eger, Christine Cannon Buchar, Kiki Cannon, Carolyn Cannon, George W. Cannon and Timothy James Cannon. She also leaves 12 grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

Mass was said March 13 at St. Mark’s, and there will be a service for family and friends in Muskegon later this summer, said her daughter.

Mary Ellen Cannon

By Emily J. Minor

OCEAN RIDGE — Mary Ellen Cannon, who raised her mother never publicly disclosed her age, always just saying she was “old enough.”

After the couple’s retirement, Mrs. Cannon spent even more time working in the yard — something for which she had an incredible knack.

“My dad called her the Picasso of the garden,” said K.T.

She loved to travel and would “go anywhere at the drop of the hat,” her daughter said.

Born in Providence, R.I., she graduated from Beverly Hills High School and then attended Stanford University in California. She married George W. Cannon Jr. on St. Patrick’s Day in 1954.

The couple lived in his hometown of Muskegon, Mich., and raised their six children at their home on Mona Lake. After the kids were out of the house, the couple moved to Ocean Ridge in the early 1980s, said Cannon-Eger.

Mrs. Cannon was a member of St. Mark Catholic Church in Boynton Beach and attended Mass several times a week, her daughter said.

Besides her husband, George, survivors include their six children: Cannon-Eger, Christine Cannon Buchar, Kiki Cannon, Carolyn Cannon, George W. Cannon and Timothy James Cannon. She also leaves 12 grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

Mass was said March 13 at St. Mark’s, and there will be a service for family and friends in Muskegon later this summer, said her daughter.

Mary Ellen Cannon

By Emily J. Minor

OCEAN RIDGE — Mary Ellen Cannon, who raised her mother never publicly disclosed her age, always just saying she was “old enough.”

After the couple’s retirement, Mrs. Cannon spent even more time working in the yard — something for which she had an incredible knack.

“My dad called her the Picasso of the garden,” said K.T.

She loved to travel and would “go anywhere at the drop of the hat,” her daughter said.

Born in Providence, R.I., she graduated from Beverly Hills High School and then attended Stanford University in California. She married George W. Cannon Jr. on St. Patrick’s Day in 1954.

The couple lived in his hometown of Muskegon, Mich., and raised their six children at their home on Mona Lake. After the kids were out of the house, the couple moved to Ocean Ridge in the early 1980s, said Cannon-Eger.

Mrs. Cannon was a member of St. Mark Catholic Church in Boynton Beach and attended Mass several times a week, her daughter said.

Besides her husband, George, survivors include their six children: Cannon-Eger, Christine Cannon Buchar, Kiki Cannon, Carolyn Cannon, George W. Cannon and Timothy James Cannon. She also leaves 12 grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

Mass was said March 13 at St. Mark’s, and there will be a service for family and friends in Muskegon later this summer, said her daughter.
APRIL 3

Saturday - 4/3 - Annual Egg Hunt is held at the Seacoast Soccer Complex, Seacoast Blvd., Delray Beach. Ages 1-8; Easter Bunny arrives at 8 am; egg hunt begins at 9 am; $4. Registration: 742-6650.

Sunday - 4/3 -

- 4/3-4/10 Annual Egg Hunt is held at the Seacoast Soccer Complex, Seacoast Blvd., Delray Beach. Ages 1-8; Easter Bunny arrives at 8 am; egg hunt begins at 9 am; $4. Registration: 742-6650.
- Easter Sunrise Service is held at 6:30 am at R.G. Kruesler Park at the Lake Worth Beach, 30 S. Ocean Blvd., Lake Worth. All are welcome. Following service, public is invited to breakfast at Our Savior Lutheran Church, 1615 Lake Ave., Lake Worth. Fee will be offered. 342-4430.
- 4/4 - Karate for Youth is held at the Boynton Beach Art Center, 125 S. Ocean Blvd., Boynton Beach on Saturdays from 10-11 am. $25/residents, $32/non-residents. Registration: 742-6223.
4/7 - JAMbooda: Music & Movement at the Boynton Beach Ferrer School, 732-2045.

4/7 - Race and War in France: Colonial Forces Southern Command/U.S. Fourth Infantry Division is presented by Carlos A. Cowley, M.D., at the Delray Beach Public Library, 100 W. Atlantic Ave. 2 pm. Free. 742-6397.

4/7 - Ride & Remember Trolley Tour – 90-minute tour focuses on Delray’s historic districts. 10 am pick-up at Canvas Cottage, 5 N.E. First St. 315/312 members $60, Spady Museum and Delray Beach Historical Society reservations: 279-8883.

4/7 - Knit in the Park at Delray Beach Public Library, 100 W. Atlantic Ave. Class offered again 4/22. 10:30 am. $20 donation.

4/7 - Dancing at Rick’s Café – Dance to music of Frankie Stall, Benny Goodman, Tommy Dorsey, Gene Krupa and Glenn Miller with feature performances by the A.N.T.H.U.M. Jazz Band every Thursday at the Boynton Beach Senior Center, 1021 S. Federal Hwy. Food and beverage available for purchase. Reservations: 742-6707.

4/7 - Kerry Maxx Cook Book - Best selling author, Kerry Maxx, will be at the Boynton Beach Senior Center for two decades in the notorious death house among women. 10 am at Old School Theatre at Old School 51 N. Swain Ave., Delray Beach. 2 pm. 520-245-2021 ext. 1.

4/7 - Annual Spring Show & Sale is held at the Delray Beach City Library. $20 donation. 9:30-11 am. Registration: 742-6397.

4/7 - Child Safety Presentational is offered as a one-day class at Bethesda Memorial Hospital, 2660 Delray Beach Blvd. Infant CPR for children up to eight years old and how to perform basic first aid. 10 am to 4 pm. $40 per couple or $25 per person. Registration: 369-225.

4/7 - Children’s Etiquette Class – 5-week class at the Schoolhouse Children’s Museum, 129 E. Ocean Ave., Boynton Beach. Sponsored by the Friends of the Boynton Beach City Library. 520 donation. 9:30-11 am. Registration: 279-1380 ext. 22.

4/7 - Murat “Mickie” Siebert speaks at the League of Women Voters 90th Anniversary Celebration Luncheon at the Boynton Beach Hotel, 100 N. Ocean Blvd., West Palm Beach. Siebert, the first woman to own a seat on the New York Stock Exchange, will address the following topic at the meeting at 30. SS/Non-members $47. 787-6777

4/7 - The Passing Zone Door, Free/Members. 236-1825.

4/7 - Kerry Maxx Cook Book - Best selling author, Kerry Maxx, will be at the Boynton Beach Senior Center for two decades in the notorious death house among women. 10 am at Old School Theatre at Old School 51 N. Swain Ave., Delray Beach. 2 pm. 520-245-2021 ext. 1.

4/7 - Annual Spring Show & Sale is held at the Delray Beach City Library. $20 donation. 9:30-11 am. Registration: 742-6397.

4/8 - Kerry Maxx Cook Book - Best selling author, Kerry Maxx, will be at the Boynton Beach Senior Center for two decades in the notorious death house among women. 10 am at Old School Theatre at Old School 51 N. Swain Ave., Delray Beach. 2 pm. 520-245-2021 ext. 1.

4/7 - Annual Spring Show & Sale is held at the Delray Beach City Library. $20 donation. 9:30-11 am. Registration: 742-6397.

4/8 - Kerry Maxx Cook Book - Best selling author, Kerry Maxx, will be at the Boynton Beach Senior Center for two decades in the notorious death house among women. 10 am at Old School Theatre at Old School 51 N. Swain Ave., Delray Beach. 2 pm. 520-245-2021 ext. 1.

4/7 - Annual Spring Show & Sale is held at the Delray Beach City Library. $20 donation. 9:30-11 am. Registration: 742-6397.

4/8 - Kerry Maxx Cook Book - Best selling author, Kerry Maxx, will be at the Boynton Beach Senior Center for two decades in the notorious death house among women. 10 am at Old School Theatre at Old School 51 N. Swain Ave., Delray Beach. 2 pm. 520-245-2021 ext. 1.

4/7 - Annual Spring Show & Sale is held at the Delray Beach City Library. $20 donation. 9:30-11 am. Registration: 742-6397.

4/8 - Kerry Maxx Cook Book - Best selling author, Kerry Maxx, will be at the Boynton Beach Senior Center for two decades in the notorious death house among women. 10 am at Old School Theatre at Old School 51 N. Swain Ave., Delray Beach. 2 pm. 520-245-2021 ext. 1.

4/7 - Annual Spring Show & Sale is held at the Delray Beach City Library. $20 donation. 9:30-11 am. Registration: 742-6397.

4/8 - Kerry Maxx Cook Book - Best selling author, Kerry Maxx, will be at the Boynton Beach Senior Center for two decades in the notorious death house among women. 10 am at Old School Theatre at Old School 51 N. Swain Ave., Delray Beach. 2 pm. 520-245-2021 ext. 1.

4/7 - Annual Spring Show & Sale is held at the Delray Beach City Library. $20 donation. 9:30-11 am. Registration: 742-6397.
Beach Bookstore, 273 NE 2nd Ave., Delray Beach. 7 pm. Free. 279-7990

Friday - 4/17 - Free Pre-Make & Take: Handprint Hearts - Kids make crafts at the School Library. 11 am-12:30 pm. Free. Beinecke 6th-9th grade. 25.20.

Friday - 4/17 - annual Dove Luncheon is hosted by Hospice of Palm Beach County at the Indian Trails Country Club, 11151 N. Military Trail, Wellington. 11 am. Silent auction and raffle with host speaker Henry Winkler. 100% of proceeds go to Hospice of Palm Beach County. 8:30 am-2:30 pm. Free. 400-6074.

Friday - 4/17 - Annual Meeting and Sunset Potluck dinner at the Delray Beach Preservation Trust at the 1916 Carlos Scheffel Deco Home, 1115 NE 5th Ave. 5:30-7:30 pm. $20/door. 755-0773 or https://dbptrust.com.

Friday - 4/17 - Gallery opening featuring the work of Fine Art photography, black and white images of the Kanz design. The work is set at the Arts Gallery, 777 S. Ocean Blvd., Palm Beach. 6-8 pm. Free. 655-9309.

Saturday - 4/17 - Boys & Girls Club Art Show is open to men and women. 6-10 pm. $18-

Sunday - 4/18 - A Celebration of Mothers Matinee Series presents song stylist Elka James at the Delray Beach Public Library, 100 NE 2nd Ave. 2 pm. Free. 264-4100 or 264-4110.

Sunday - 4/18 - Grand Opening of Palm Beach Dermatology Institute & Spa. 760 N. Congress Ave. Suite 200, Boynton Beach. 4-10 pm. 50% off new patient special. RSVP: 733-0077.

Monday - 4/18 - Cerberus: French Francs: Common Conversation Group is held at the Delray Beach Public Library, 100 NE 2nd Ave. 9-11 am. Free. 264-4100.

Monday - 4/18 - Annual Marine Yard Sale is held at the West Palm Beach Yacht Club, 201 Fisher Dr., West Palm Beach. 10 am-3 pm. 50% off all yard sale items. 696-2500.

Monday - 4/18 - Beach Cleanup is held at the Delray Beach Public Library, 208 S. Ocean Ave. 10 am. Free. 264-4100.

April 18-24 - Community Calendar 31
InterFaith21

Hindus join local observance of Day of Prayer

The uplifting annual National Day of Prayer program, hosted locally by the Delray Beach Interfaith Clergy Association, is as representative of humanity and our various faith traditions as it gets around these parts. And it just became more so: For the first time, Hindu is among the myriad faiths to be represented at the Duncan Center at 6 p.m. on May 6.

Although they are our fellow citizens from all walks of life, most of us know little of those who worship at the roughly 50 Hindu temples and religious centers in Florida. Thus we may be surprised to learn that the introductory question at the www.BAPS.org Web site, to which Dhaval Bhagat referred me, is consistent with the sentiments of most faith traditions and even those of people who claim no particular faith: “Many ask, ‘How can you mix spirituality and social service?’ We ask, ‘How can you separate the two?’” One result was the Queen’s Award for Voluntary Service to the BAPS Children’s Forum in London last October.

Bhagat is media coordinator for the BAPS Shri Swaminarayan Mandir, at 541 S.E. 18th Ave. in Boynton Beach — next to the Publix behind Sunshine Square at Woolbright and Federal. “Mandir,” he explained, “is the word for the temple.” The congregation is completing a renovation in preparation for its May 9 grand opening that dovetails nicely with the prayer day. That will provide another opportunity to know those in our community who practice the world’s third-largest religion (after Christianity and Islam), indigenous to Southern Asia, with a billion adherents and a broad range of traditions.

Bhagat says congregants here worshipped in halls and homes, just as those of many different faiths got started, before the mandir opened in 2001. An average of 350 people now gather for the main service on Sundays from 4 to 6 p.m. He’s been going for 12 years, he said.

Similarly, for two years Devanathan Mahadevan has been priest of the 1,200-family South Florida Hindu Temple on Griffin Road in Fort Lauderdale. He’s participated in interfaith activities from there to California to Ohio, and it shows. “Water’s the same, whether we call it the Indian Ocean or the Atlantic Ocean,” said Mahadevan. “Same with the human being. We are going toward our own destiny. But we are going on different paths. Trying to understand each other, that is the only thing we need.”

Here’s applause for the path that makes his ages-old tradition among the enlightening participants in the national prayer observance. C.B. Hanif is a writer, editor and media and inter-religious affairs consultant. Find him at www.interfaith21.com.
Shelter activist sees work ahead in legislation

By Arden Moore

The first place Suzi Goldsmith headed after moving from Detroit to Palm Beach County in 1985 wasn’t to dine at the famed Breakers Hotel, tour the Flagler Museum or catch an outdoor concert at Bryant Park.

She made a beeline to an animal shelter in Boca Raton to volunteer. But if you know Goldsmith, such a choice comes as no surprise. After all, she has championed pets since her toddler years and dedicates her life to ensure shelter dogs and cats land permanent, loving homes.

And, this Manalapan resident loves to host parties — especially ones for good causes.

Case in point: the 8th annual Doggie Ball unleashed March 21 at the Boca West Country Club. Attendees donned cowboy boots and Stetsons to round up donations to benefit the Tri-County Humane Society, a no-kill shelter Goldsmith co-founded with Jeannette Christos. It serves Palm Beach, Broward and Miami-Dade counties.

Although the 400-plus guest list was limited to two-leggeds, the event did feature Sir Lancelot Encore, a dog belonging to Edgar and Nina Otto, as Grand Marshall Pooch. Yes, Goldsmith does enjoy planning fundraising events, but told The Coastal Star that after this Doggie Ball, she intends to focus on lobbying for legislation to better the lives of companion animals all over the state.

“I want to spend more time with our animal shelter and helping legislation get passed to stop puppy mills,” she said. “At Tri-County, it is all about being there for the animals, nursing them back to health and finding them forever homes. There’s a lot of work to do.

Goldsmith doesn’t mind the task. In her native state, she was hands-on involved with the Michigan Humane Society. When she and her family moved to Palm Beach County, she saw the opportunity in 1997 to obtain a long-term lease with the city of Boca Raton to convert a kill shelter into a no-kill one.

“When you’re young, you are naive and feel that you can do anything,” she says. “It really upset us that it was a kill shelter, so when the city of Boca Raton announced it was putting the shelter up for bid, Jeannette, a couple others and I rallied. They gave us a 75-year lease.”

Before she can continue the phone conversation, Katie, her newly adopted golden retriever bounds into the room and displays tail-wagging exuberance, much to Goldsmith’s delight.

“This dog is about 2 and recently came into our shelter after her owners informed us that they couldn’t find jobs in Florida and were moving to England. They dropped off Katie at our shelter because they knew we were a no-kill,” recalls Goldsmith. “Katie was not doing well. She was very depressed and had never been in a shelter. I adopted her. In no time, her personality blossomed. She is dynamic, full of life.”

And, has yet to realize that she weighs 60 pounds, not 6.

“It’s hilarious to watch Katie trying to squeeze her large body in the small doggy bed meant for my other dog, Marshmallow, my 7-year-old white toy poodle,” says Goldsmith. “Katie thinks she’s a little dog.”

As for daily walks with two-leggeds, Goldsmith is still trying to master the two-leash routine.

“The little one carries me in one direction and the big dog pulls me in the other direction,” she laughs. “Both are great dogs. I feel blessed to have them in my life.”

Since childhood, Goldsmith has always shared her life with a dog or two. She feels lucky to have never met a dog she doesn’t like.

And, she acknowledges the influence they’ve played in how she views life and her character development.

“Dogs have brought me humility, understanding and commitment,” she says. “They put smiles on my face. They never give up on happiness. And most importantly, they are always there, in good times and in bad times.”

Arden Moore, an animal behavior consultant, editor, author and speaker, happily shares her home with two dogs, two cats and one overworked vacuum cleaner. Tune in to her “Oh Behave!” show on Pet Life Radio.com, and contact her at arden@ardenmoore.com.
Each month, The Coastal Star features a home for sale in our community. The House of the Month is presented as a service to our advertisers, and provides readers with a peek inside one of our very special homes.

Ocean views abound in coastal Delray home

This is a stunning contemporary-designed home, new to the market, with cobalt barrel tile roof, sitting directly on the oceanfront of northern Delray Beach.

This home presents a personal swath of sandy beach as well as a fabulous wraparound ocean vista. There are six bedrooms, five full- and three half-baths and an attached two-car garage within the total square-footage of 7,594. Two stories and volume ceilings add to the spacious feeling of this property. In addition, there is an elevator, a fireplace and a captivating living room from which to sit and watch the waves rolling in.

Outside there is a covered patio as well as an open patio and pool just steps from the ocean, offering a wonderful venue for seasonal entertaining.

Every amenity and detail expected in a home of this stature are represented including flooring in ceramic tile, hardwood and marble in the elegant foyer entrance.

For an opportunity to view this property, call Val Coz, Ocean Ridge resident since 1985. Fite Shavell & Associates, Inc. 561-386-8011 or contact: vcoz@fiteshavell.com

Offered at $4,995,000.

The house has sweeping oceanfront views, yet is within walking distance of the bustling Atlantic Avenue corridor with its unique shops and first rate restaurants.

Privacy and serenity abound at this spectacular home. It also represents a phenomenal oceanfront value.

The upstairs living area has hardwood floors and French doors leading to a wrap-around balcony that captures the beauty of the water from another perspective.

A marble fireplace is the centerpiece of the two-story great room also decorated with marble flooring that directly overlooks the ocean.
In the heart of Pineapple Grove
200 NE 2nd Avenue, Suite 101, Delray Beach, FL 33444 (corner of 2nd Street)
Tel (561) 272-8270 • Fax (561) 272-8205 • www.villagesquarehomeinteriors.com

Open 7 Days A Week
Monday to Saturday 10 - 5 • Sunday 11 - 5
CASCADES - BOYNTON BEACH
Estate sale in great 55+ gated golf community with all the amenities. Low HOA, no equity or membership fees. Largest model single family home in the community, 4 bedroom, 2.5 bath, 2 car garage. Offered at $339,000

DREAM HOUSE
This is THE Best of Everything! 17,000 sq. ft. lot, 8,000 sq. ft. of Luxury living and relaxing space. 4 bedroom main house, 2 Bedroom guest house, 6 car state of the art garage with Hydraulic lifts for the car collector, game room, office, gourmet kitchen with true butlers pantry and wine room. New Construction with the style and design everyone desires. $2,950,000

OCEAN RIDGE COTTAGE
A barefoot stroll to the sand from this 1950’s beach cottage east of A1A, 2/1/1 on a 10,000 square foot lot. Enjoy as is or build new, ocean views possible. $895,000

TOSCANA – HIGHLAND BEACH
Watch the sunrise and the sunset from this 3 bedroom 3.5 bath designer decorated condo. Being offered turnkey this 11th floor stunner features 2,880 sq ft of luxury living in a white glove building offering all the amenities including valet parking, concierge service, 2 pools, beach club, fitness center and more. $1,595,000

WALK TO BEACH – UPDATED
Great Ocean Ridge property, east of A1A, 3/2 with heated pool, updated kitchen & baths, upstairs master with loft, lovely covered loggia– all just steps to the sand. Move in and head to the beach! $ 815,000

DIRECT OCEANFRONT-DELRAY BEACH
Lowest price direct oceanfront single family home on the beach in Delray. 6000+ sq feet of living space, 6 bedroom home with endless ocean views and 100 ft of beachfront all within walking distance to Atlantic Ave restaurants and shopping. Offered at $4,995,000

LIVE AT THE BEACH
100 FEET OF DEEDED BEACH ACCESS STEPS FROM YOUR FRONT DOOR. Totally updated 4/3/1 pool home on oversize lot. Two master suites- one on 1st floor, one on 2nd; great updated open kitchen, beautiful modern baths, move right in! $1,350,000

OCEAN RIDGE COTTAGE
A barefoot stroll to the sand from this 1950’s beach cottage east of A1A, 2/1/1 on a 10,000 square foot lot. Enjoy as is or build new, ocean views possible. $895,000

DUNE DECK PENTHOUSE
Big ocean views from this 1 bedroom 1.5 bath penthouse directly on the sand in South Palm Beach. Bright, light and airy with large master, open living dining area and spacious kitchen with built-in office area. Owner is motivated and says "bring all offers" Offered at $299,000

SOUTH PALM BEACH CHARMER
Lovely 2/2 with screened & covered patio, this 1st floor charmer at the Intracoastal complex of Palm Beach Villas features tile floors, new plantation shutters, small pets ok, and no age restrictions. Reduced to $189,000

DUNDEE OCEANFRONT RENTAL
This luxurious fully furnished 5 bedroom 5 bath home sits on 1 acre of direct oceanfront and has just received a full makeover and is ready for vacationers. New furnishings and finishes throughout, designer decorated with pool on the beach. Available monthly at $20,000 – call for weekly rates.

WALK TO BEACH
from this perfect Ocean Ridge single family rental. Bermuda style home with 3 bedrooms, 3 baths and 1,811 sq. ft. living area. Covered, screened patio with garden view surrounded with tropical foliage and fruit trees. Pets welcome. $3,300/mo.

Val Coz
Ocean Ridge Resident since 1985
Specializing in Coastal Properties from Palm Beach to Delray
561.386.8011
vcoz@fiteshavell.com

Search Now at www.FITESHAVELL.COM

Source: Data supplied by RealMLS 9/25/09. Information is deemed accurate but not guaranteed.